Garden Spot

$41,000 top bid

BY LAURA ENGLAND

LANCASTER — Despite a constant, chilling rain which dampened the county Wednesday, dairy farmers poured out in numbers to attend the 1984 Exclusive III and 329th Garden Spot Sale held at the Guernsey Pavilion in Lancaster.

Although chilly outside, the Guernsey Pavilion was warmed by the over 100 quality Holstein calves, cows and bulls consigned to the sale. Cattle from New York, Michigan, Virginia, Illinois, New Jersey, Ohio, Indiana and Pennsylvania made their way to the sale block during the five hour sale.

The first animal on the sale block walked away as high seller. Eric-Dew Mars Toni, a 2-year-old

PFA outlines legislative priorities

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

CAMP HILL — Calling for a cooperative effort "to improve the quality of life of every Pennsylvanian and to insure the growth of the state's Number One industry, agriculture," president Keith W. Eckel outlined the legislative priorities of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association Tuesday night.

Speaking to a packed ballroom of some 600 county association delegates, representatives, senators and PDA officials, Eckel stressed three main legislative concerns of PFA.

One of the concerns is in the process of being solved; one concerns the future and likely has the greatest long-range impact on ag in the state; and the last – the

Pa. reports creation of milk marketing plan

HARRISBURG — State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell has outlined a plan calling for a portion of the federal government 15 cent assesment on milk production be directed toward the creation of a Pennsylvania milk marketing program

According to the plan, dairy farmers could approve 10 cents of their deduction to be set aside for promotion and nutrition education programs through existing dairy council activities in Pennsylvania. The program would be conducted according to national dairy promotion program guidelines This program will complement existing federal order promotion programs.

Hallowell said the 15 cents per hundredweight deduction is already mandatory for dairy promotion activites under the provisions of the Federal Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act of 1983 However, creation of the state milk marketing program would allow 10 cents of each deduction "to be targeted strictly for promotion of dairy products produced in Pennsylvania," Hallowell added

The Secretary emphasized that participation in the program is on a voluntary basis and that dairymen will be notified by mail in the near future to seek the support of those not already contributing to a federal order promotion program

The program will be administered by an advisory board comprised of participating dairymen and be chaired by the Secretary of Agriculture.

MARKET COMMENT: Prices unchanged to higher. Cartoned egg movement is fairly good overall. Orders to regular accounts are fair, but where promotions are in progress, orders are generally good. A good buying interest still exists for gradable nest runs, but there is some reluctance to pay current asking prices. Offerings are limited and help with much confidence.

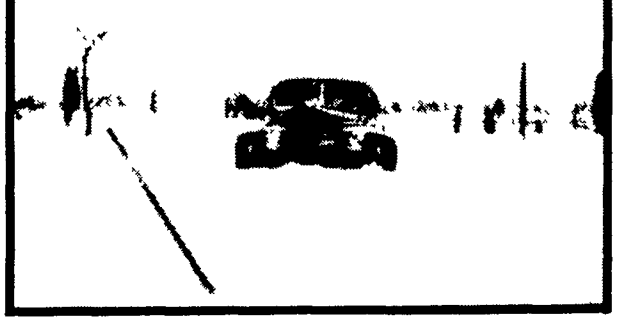
WE'VE COME A LONG WAY SINCE 1947!



The customer who received that first delivery of Moyer's Chicks in January 1947 was, no doubt, unimpressed with the delivery vehicle. Six boxes of baby chicks in the back seat of a 1941 Oldsmobile Sedan was indeed a humble beginning!

More impressive was Moyer's determination to make the delivery on time and with a minimum of stress. The first challenge was digging through the snowdrifts in front of the hatchery!

Today Moyer's is no less determined to meet the industry's challenges of large volumes of chicks hatched and delivered with minimal stress. Now Moyer's hatches more in one day than the sum total of 68,000 for the first whole year in 1947.

Deliveries of up to 50,000 chicks per load are made comfortably year round in Moyer's climate-controlled vans.

Yes, we've come a long way, and our sights are set on the bright new challenging horizon of the future.

FEED 'EM RIGHT

Pennfield Dry Cow Program

The 60 day period before freshening is a most important time in the life cycle of the cow. During the period she will "store-up" vitamin, mineral, and energy reserves which she will draw on during her following peak of lactation. Over 50% of her calf weight will develop during this period, and being a good mother, she will supply nutrients to her calf before she will rebuild her own body reserves.

Good dairymen have seen that proper feeding management during this critical-period, means easier calving, better appetite during early lactation, and cows breed back better because they have nutritional reserves to draw on during peak lactation.

Balanced Nutrition Is The Key

A properly formulated dry cow program allows the dairymen to "control" the nutrient intake of the cow. Calcium and phosphorus levels must be properly maintained and roughages should be checked for protein, energy, calcium and phosphorus.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

APRIL 2-8, 1984

Showers bring flowers with nectar for bees to devour.

Prune ragged branches and dead wood from shrubs now First quarter of the moon April 8 (Sun) Average length of days for the week, 12 hours 54 minutes First performance of human cannonball circus act April 2, 1877 Hank Aaron hit 715th home run, breaking Babe Ruth's lifetime record, April 8 1974 Argentine invasion force seized Falkland Islands, April 2, 1982 Chiang Kai shek died April 5, 1975 Lightning started $15 million fire in San Luis Obispo, Calif , that lasted five days and burned 900 acres April 7, 1926

Everything is good in its season

Ask the Old Farmer: How can we prevent skunks from coming near our living room and bedroom windows in the evening and stinking up the air that comes in the windows at night, often about an hour or two after dark? We have no cats or dogs in our neighborhood to stir them up G W F, Canandaigua, N Y

Skunks spray only to defend themselves, so something or somebody is bothering them Skunks are looking for food so keep garbage pails covered They dig holes in a lawn for grubs so maybe spray the lawn with grub killer Do away with their source of food and they will hunt elsewhere

Home Hints Windows can be cleaned better on a cloudy day than a clear one

Going, going, gone

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

You probably have noticed that the public sale and auction ads have been running unusually heavy in Lancaster Farming during the past month. For the past five issues nearly an entire section has been devoted to them.

Not only are the number of sales higher but the peak sale season appears to be extended and lasting longer this year

Reasons for the large number of sales are likely quite diverse and probably include a combination of the aftermath of a tough few years on the farm, the milk diversion program and the increasing pressures of non-ag development on farmland

But whatever the reasons for the decision to sell out, each auction is a personal story of a farm family that carved out a niche in the total agricultural heritage of the area It's a niche that is now being lost forever and its story goes well beyong the cold, impersonal black and white auction ad or public sale report

For example, there's the decorated candle box found among some tools at a recent sale. It brought some $3,300. Who decorated it? Did a bygone family member toss it in the tool shed when rural electrification came to the farm? Or perhaps a sharp antique buyer trying to disguise a bargain? How many discussions were conducted by the light of its candles -- both the good times and the bad down through the years?

Or, the tin coffee can that went for a top bid of $250 at another sale. How many cups of good, steaming coffee did it provide down through the years to warm someone before they went off to the barn on a cold, winter morning?

Or, the Farmall H tractor that brought $750, the walking plow at $80 or the grain reaper at $350. What kind of times did these implements see over the years -- both the droughty, the wet and occasionally the just right?

The china head doll at $390 or the high chair at $285. How many generations played with that doll or ate at that chair and then went on to become a segment in the continuing ag history of a farm?

The butcher kettle at $98, the sausage stuffer at $105, the crock at $60 How many hogs or heads of cabbage went through them over the years to fill the canning jars lining the pantry shelves?

The horse-drawn sleigh at $255 How many trips were made over snow-covered roads to visit family at holidays or provide transportation during courting?

Each item in an auction ad or sale report has a story to tell. Together, each of these little tales make up the total ag heritage that is slipping away each time the gavel falls.

And those prices the items bring -- which cause many a graying head to shake -- are attempts by both ag and non-ag people alike to hold onto just a little bit of that heritage.

Yes, the trinkets of ag heritage are being preserved on kitchen walls and corner shelves. But is ag itself being preserved? The land and the will and means of continued farming?

What will the auction ads and public sale reports of the future say?

What stories will be found behind the farm sale items of the future?

Let's hope that such future items and stories will be more than

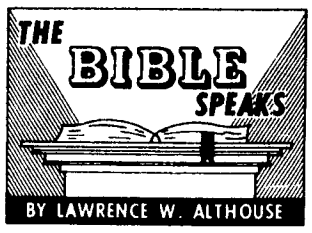
-- An Avian flu quarantine sign and a Task Force logo emblem

-- A copy of a report on a soil or well water study involved in the Chesapeake Bay program

-- A news clipping that a hazardous waste dump was located in the middle of a prime agricultural area.

What we do today will help determine what items will be included in the memorabilia going up for auction in the future

And, what we do today will help determine what future generations will pay -- not for public sale mementos but for the coming overall ag heritage that results from actions and decisions of today



THE GLORY SEAT
April 1, 1984

Background Scripture:
Mark 10.
Devotional Reading:
Mark 10:23-31.

This may come as a surprise to you, but I want you to know that writing this weekly column is a rather dangerous occupation. And I'm not referring to irate readers, either - there have been refreshingly few of them over the years.

What makes writing this column dangerous is that, in order to write it, I first have to read and reflect upon a passage of scripture selected by the interdenominational Committee on Uniform Series. It is in the reading and study of this assigned passage of scripture that puts me into a kind of weekly spiritual jeopardy.

THE GLORY SEATS

For example, when I read Mark 10 a few minutes ago, I felt a rather substantial stab in my conscience. Mark 10 fell on me like a ton of bricks. Here's Jesus laying it out with disturbing simplicity what it means to be his disciple. Of course, the twelve who are his closest followers don't seem to be able to absorb any of what he is saying. But the problem with Mark 10 is not that the disciples didn't seem to buy what Jesus says following him is all about, but that today we still don't appear to have gotten his message.

As I look about me, it seems that little or nothing of the values Jesus lifts up in Mark 10 are very important in the life of Christianity as I know it today. For example, in Mark 10 Jesus confounds his disciples - and us - by emphasizing the importance of children in the kingdom of God: "Whoever receives one such child in my name receives me..." (10:37). I don't mean to imply that in my experience we've been unkind to children in the churches, but that it is very obvious in many that the really important people are the adults.

Then, in verses 17-22, there's the story of the man with "great possessions." Now that's just the kind of man most of us try to get in our churches and "elevated" to a position of authority. We wouldn't think of telling the man that "You lack one thing; go, sell what you have, and give to the poor..." Despite all our fund drives and budget campaigns, we try to take the bite out of membership in the body of Christ.

GETTING THE NEEDLE

And Jesus' saying about how hard it is for a man with great possessions to "enter the kingdom of God" (10:23-27) is even more difficult for us. Our objective is to find and build-up the affluent congregation, not to tear it down.

Worst of all, however, is what he told his disciples about power and authority: "whoever would be great among you must be your servant" (10:43). We've never really bought that one, have we? We play the same "power games" in the church that are played in the rest of society, no matter how sanitized we try to make them appear. There's at least one glory seat in every church on a Sunday morning.

If that's not your experience, then praise God ! If it is, there's room on the mourner's bench with me.

For An Avian Flu Update

New outbreaks of Avian Influenza during March have slowed to the lowest level since October...only three as of this writing. A total of 287 flocks have been depopulated for a total of 11.5 million birds. Premises approved for repopulation now stands at 134 with 97 already repopulated. This is good news, but somewhat disappointing is the fact that three of the repopulated houses have broken for a second time. Monitoring efforts continue and hopefully the quarantine area can be reduced in size.

It is also important to note that the California Avian Influenza outbreak is not related. The Lancaster virus is the H_5N_2 type while the California virus is H_5N_3 and has been effective only in turkeys. In fact when the H_5N_3 was injected in chickens, there was no mortality.

I want to re-emphasize that everyone must continue very tight health security measures. This refers to pseudorabies and other diseases as well.

To Plan For Oats Planting

Some farmers are considering the use of feed oats for planting this spring, but this may not be a good idea. Feed oats may contain quackgrass, bindweed and other weed seeds. Planting feed oats will generally result in lower yields. You also have the problem that any weed seeds planted will be a problem for years to come. Keep in mind that high quality seed is the smallest part of producing a crop. So, saving a few cents by using inferior or weedy seed doesn't make much sense. On the other hand, home grown seed of varieties proven successful on the farm can be cleaned, treated and planted if the germination is 80 percent or better. You can use the old "Rag Doll" germination method where you place the seed between two pieces of burlap — roll it and keep it moist and warm. Then count the seeds that germinate against the total and determine the percent germination.

Yes you can.

You've no doubt worked out your own recipe for putting up good haylage. But can you cut the loss of dry matter and preserve the nutrients you put into your silo? You sure can. If you use Vigorsile™.

You can chop your hay earlier with less leaf loss, because Vigorsile works its best between 50% and 70% moisture. Vigorsile aids in providing the right amount of fermentation needed to preserve haylage. The result is less heat, yeast and mold. That means higher feed quality and better palatability. Feed consumption goes up and so does production.

Vigorsile haylage inoculant is a lactobacillus plantarum bacteria. And it's guaranteed strong. Guaranteed to give you more than 100 million working bacteria per gram.

So, ask your Vigortone dealer if you can preserve higher quality haylage, he'll say — yes you can.

scale that raindrop is like a bomb, tearing soil into tiny fragments, tossing them in the air and gouging a crater in the earth. Now on our scale, one raindrop is insignificant, but raindrops come in the billions and together they play a key role in soil erosion.

These tiny bombs break soil into pieces small enough to be carried away in water runoff. And this kind of runoff erosion is becoming a serious problem for everyone. This erosion is washing away our most fertile and productive farmland... that translates to higher food costs.. .not to mention the costs of filtering and treating polluted water.

To Evaluate Winter Wheat Topdressing

During this season of the year, many farmers ask the question, does winter wheat need fertilizing? According to Extension Agronomist, topdressing with fertilizer may or may not be a good idea. There are several things that should be considered before making the decision.

In the first place, do not topdress winter wheat with a fertilizer that contains nitrogen if the wheat is to be overseeded with clover or alfalfa. Nitrogen causes heavy growth of wheat which may smother out the new seeding. Now the winter wheat fields that have come through the winter thin, should be topdressed. Use only a straight nitrogen fertilizer, such as urea. Topdressing winter wheat with phosphate or potash have not given any increased wheat yields.

Apply the nitrogen fertilizer in early spring at the rate of 30-40 pounds of acutal nitrogen per acre.

BIG CLOVER...BIG ALFALFA YIELDS

Plant MorRed.

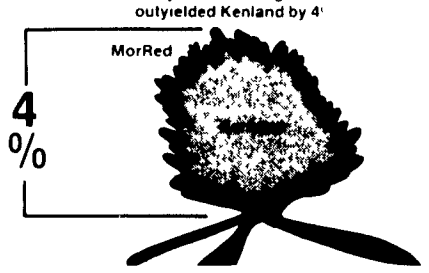
MorRed Red Clover possesses the qualities that lead toward a top yielding, short rotation hay and grazing legume.

Combined resistance to both Northern and Southern Anthracnose
Northern and southern anthracnose can kill or greatly reduce the stand life of red clover

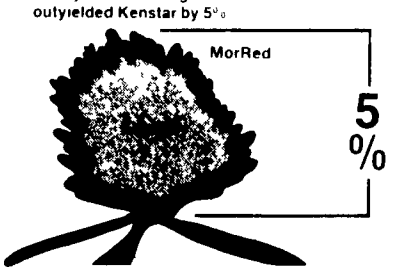
High resistance to powdery mildew
Contributes to early fade-out and reduces feed quality

Higher yield potential than Kenland or Kenstar

In 5 years of testing MorRed outyielded Kenland by 4%



In 17 years of testing MorRed outyielded Kenstar by 5%



At $100 per ton for hay that s $18 00 per year per acre more for MorRed

Improved winterhardiness
The tougher a variety the better chance the crop has to produce throughout its expected rotation

Vigorous growth and quick recovery
The higher the disease resistance the better the chance for the crop to fully express its potential

Seeding versatility
MorRed Red Clover is ideal for No-till pasture and meadow seedings in old grass stands Alone for hay and pasture MorRed can also be seeded in standing small grain or on an early prepared seed bed alone MorRed can be mixed seeded with grasses and small grains as part of a rotation or seeded in combination with other legumes—especially white clover along with grasses for hay and pasture Farmers find that when used as part of a rotation red clover is helpful in building the nitrogen level for the grain fraction of the rotation

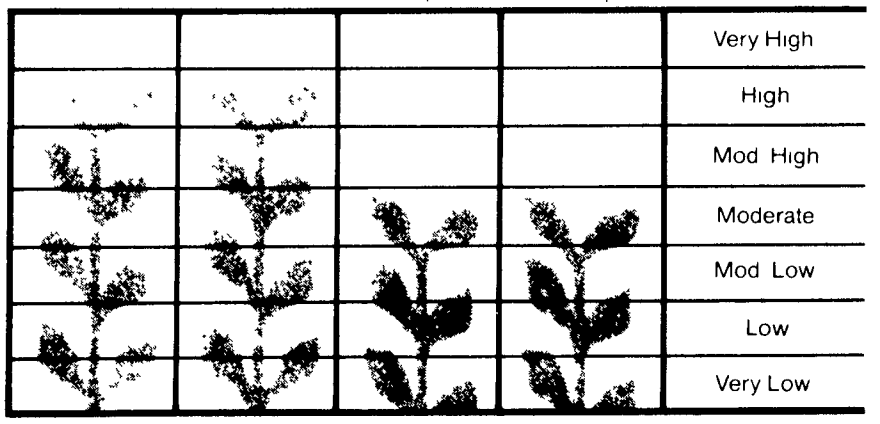
Plant OLYMPIC.

Olympic Alfalfa's high resistance to disease and overall hardiness has made Olympic a preferred variety among growers seeking high alfalfa yields

Proven high yields over a wide area
Olympic Alfalfa has produced over 10 tons/acre in several trials

High resistance to anthracnose
Anthracnose is a hidden blight in alfalfa that s a threat wherever warm humid conditions persist during the growing season It can reduce forage yields by as much as two tons per acre per year Olympic Alfalfa s resistance to this yield stealer is as good as any variety needs to be in any environment

Excellent overall disease and insect protection



Moderate winterhardiness
For it s primary area of adaptation Olympic Alfalfa s winterhardiness is fully adequate

Fast growth; early maturity
Olympic Alfalfa matures about 5 days ahead of Vernal

W. Pa. spring Holstein sale averages $1164

BY BARB RADER
Staff Correspondent

MERCER — The snow fell rapidly earlier in the morning. The wind blew, drifting roads on the third day of spring. But the Western Pa. Spring Spectacular Sale was being held as scheduled.

The barn crew and sale selectors including Laszlo Mozes, Arthur Moore, Ralph Moore, Doug Slater, Dan and Sam Kloss and Gary Miller, were finishing up last-minute details preparing the 48 head of Holsteins to go through the sale ring at 7 p.m. Not to mention the Mercer County Holstein cooks preparing all the food for the hungry or even nervous consignors.

The crowd turned out to be standing room only. Then the gavel fell as the first consignment entered the neatly 'spring' dressed sale ring.

Lot 30, a Jan. '82 Kingway Elevation Very daughter, proudly led by her young 4-H owner Alan Amon, Stoneboro, started the beginning of the sale. "Spring-Lake-Vu Very Camero", bred last Aug. to Thoryma Electra was donated last year to the young lad by the local club. Half of the proceeds went back to the 4-H'er while the county club received the other half of the $1250 purchase price.

The lots then entered the ring following the catalog sale order. Lot 1 set keen bidding pace. "Parkacres Chief Peggy," fresh March 1 and sired by Pawnee Farm Arlinda Chief, caught the eye of several bidders. Robert & Barbara Freyermuth, Meadville, held out to get the 85 point 3-year-old for $3300. She was the second high consignment of the sale.

High selling animal was purchased by Dick Shidemantle, Conneautville at $4000. The Wayne Spring Fond Apollo two year old ran a 5.4% with 1436M and 78F in 30 days. Shes out of a 2E 90 VEVE Linear system Paclamar Astronaut at 12 years 9 months. Robert Pegan, Cochranton was the consigner of "Ricopeg Astro Wayne Sally". Following her in the sale ring was her Dec. 9 calf The Wileeda Citation R calf looking as spectacular as her mother brought the bidding out strong for a sum of $1550.

With the sale averaging $1164, prices were down about $200 from last year. Sherman Allen, Conneaut Lake, was auctioneer with roy Simpson, Butler, reading pedigrees. Cattle went to Mississippi, Iowa, and Ohio with some retained locally in Pa.

Rural development receives USDA policy priority

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The director of the federal Office of Rural Development Policy (ORDP) said recently that non-farm rural development has been assigned "unprecedented policy priority" by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

In testimony before the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Agriculture and Rural Development, ORDP director Willard "Bill" Phillips Jr., said the policy office has concentrated its work in five major areas:

— Preparing a strategy to encompass all Federal rural development efforts.

— Sponsoring leadership assistance projects for rural government leaders and private enterprises.

— Improving coordination of the federal response to State and local rural needs.

— Researching special rural issues.

— Increasing public awareness of rural America's problems and potential.

"The mission of ORDP is to serve as an advocate for rural America," Phillips said. "We intend to identify rural America's most important needs, and suggest effective ways of meeting those needs."

He said this mission requires more than the work of ORDP, USDA, or even the federal government alone. "Successful rural development involves a partnership of these institutions with state and local governments and with private enterprise as well" Phillips said.

The rural development strategy process, he said, has raised non-farm rural issues to "a much higher level of visibility and importance within the USDA and it has revealed an extraordinary interdependence between the success of millions of American farms and the growth of the nonfarm rural economy."

Rural leadership assistance efforts, Phillips said, range from a meeting last year between Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block and leaders of 25 national rural development organizations to ORDP participation in the "Main Street" community development program of the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

These efforts also included assistance to rural businesses seeking to enter the export market, encouragement of "homegrown" development of new products and technologies in rural America and improving miniority participation in rural economic progress.

The meeting between Secretary Block and rural development leaders, following the Secretary's agriculture summit with farm organization leaders, illustrates dramatically the "unprecedented policy priority" that non-farm rural development is receiving from USDA Phillips said.

Improvement in policy coordination also include creation of a special working group to respond to priority issues raised by a state-level "needs assessment" for rural America, increased rural participation in other Federal programs, and the rural application of a new "negotiated investment strategy" involving local, state and federal authorities in special community development plans.

ORDP's joint work with USDA's Economic Research Service, the U.S. Census Bureau and other groups provides a clearer statistical view and better policy analysis of rural issues.

To increase public awareness of these issues, ORDP has organized an extensive schedule of rural development conferences, and is producing a Rural America Review newsletter and a Rural Resources Guide, Phillips said.

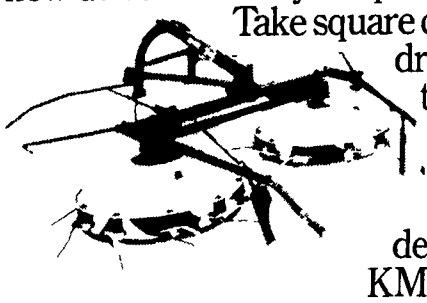
HOW TO MAKE THE SYSTEM WORK FOR YOU.

You don't even have to write your Congressman. Just get the Vicon Haying System is all.

Because with this trio—A Vicon KM mower/conditioner, one of our heavy-duty hay rakes or tedders, and a new Vicon square baler—you can make hay faster, better and more economically.

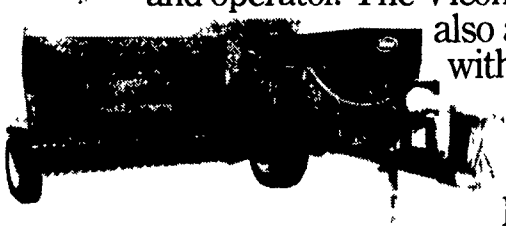
The KM 321, for instance, is the fastest mower/conditioner in the world. It's 30 percent faster than other conventional mower/conditioners. A new drive unit lets you operate non-stop.



Take square corners with no drive line vibration or danger of failure. And even if you've got a heavy, dew-wet crop, the KM 321 won't plug, and won't leave you worrying about leaf loss.

The Vicon line of rakes and tedders are just as efficient in their own right. They're versatile, ideal for short crops or big balers. Rake, turn, fluff. Quickly and cleanly. In a wide range of widths. With easy tine replacement. And, best of all, Vicon rakes and tedders are gentle on your crop.

Last but not least, you'll find that the Vicon SP square balers give you the convenient range of bale sizes and weights to meet your haying needs. The unique counter-balanced flywheel eliminates drive line vibration. The result is a smooth running baler with less strain on the PTO, tractor and operator. The Vicon SP is also available with hydraulic bale thrower.



For more information on the Vicon Hay Systems, or the name of your closest Vicon dealer, just call or write. We think you'll see that when you can't beat the system, there's only one thing left for a grower to do.

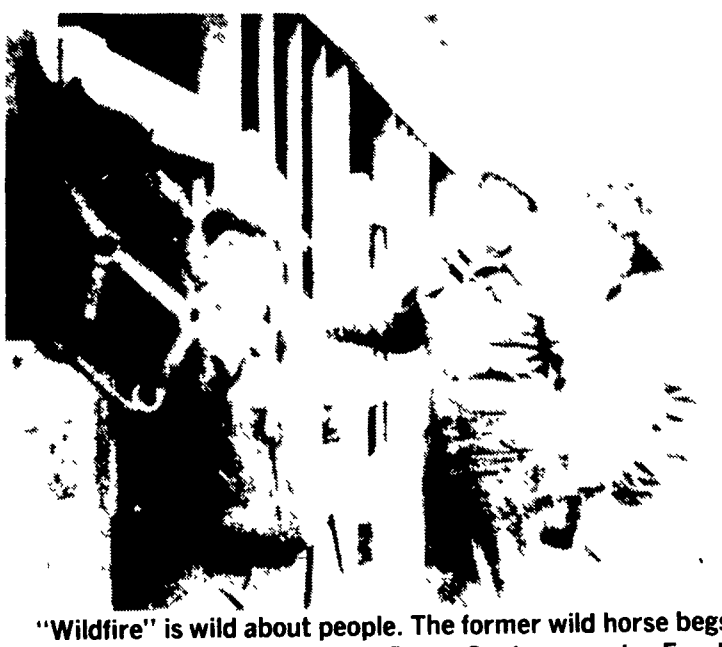
LEWISBERRY — Blonde and petite, the 12-year-old leaned against a feedrack at the Wild Horse and Burro Center near Lewisberry, never taking her quiet eyes from the cluster of horses cautiously moving about the pen.

Already, Chris Corkle had made her choice. It would be the young horse with the big white blaze over the nose, in stark contrast to the rust-hued coat.

Chris lives just up the road from the Bureau of Land Management's Wild Horse and Burro Center, operated by Frank and Doris Goodlander. Last year, Chris' mother, Betty Trout, had selected a horse with strikingly similar features. When she learned, last Friday morning, that the first horse shipment of the year had arrived, Mrs. Trout obtained permission for Chris to leave school early, in order to have one of the first choices from the new arrivals.

The 50 horses shyly investigating the pens had been rounded up from the barren public ragelands of Nevada. For the three previous days, they'd been traveling across the country in a shiny, double-deckered tractor-trailer rig, and rested, fed and watered periodically through each day as the law mandates. Even while Chris watched "her" 10-month-old weanling the hauler had donned his wide-brimmed cowboy hat after catching a couple of hours rest and headed back out the road west.



"Wildfire" is wild about people. The former wild horse begs for attention as Wild Horse and Burro Center operator Frank Goodlander chats with visitors inquiring about adoption.

Chris Corkle picks out the wild horse she will adopt. She selects friendly equine and one that has similar facial markings to one that her mother adopted a year ago.

She hadn't settled on a name yet. That could wait until later, after she'd gotten to know the animal's personality better. Of one thing she was certain. Hers was the friendliest in the lot.

"I picked mine, last May, because he was the friendliest of that shipment," relates Betty Trout. "His name is R.B., but everyone around here just calls him Mr. Friendly."

R.B. was 13-months-old when he was adopted. The gelding is one of about 20 horses boarded year-round at the Center's facilities.

"In no time at all, we could handle him," she adds. "He'll be broken this summer; already he's halter broken and I can lunge him. We practically live here on weekends now and help out with whatever we can."

While small groups of visitors view the pens of available adoptees, it soon becomes evident which animals are new arrivals and which ones are the old-timers at the Center.

Newly-arrived horses shy away from strangers, hovering a bit nervously back away from the racks stuffed full of hay, waiting to nibble until after onlookers move on down the long feed alley to other pens.

By contrast, horses that have been at the center for a few weeks either ignore or seem to outright enjoy the company, busy instead burying their noses in the ever-available supplies of hay that constitute their diets.

Studying the horses nearby is Sandy McLaughlin, R2 Felton, York County. The mare Mrs.

Dairy family gets York Extension award

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

YORK — York County's Extension Service recognized a family of long-time supporters of the 4-H and extension programs as the highlight of their annual meeting and dinner last Friday evening at the York Fairground's banquet center.

The Rodney Eisenhart's of Thomasville are partners in a family dairy farm and for many years have worked with the local 4-H clubs. Rodney and his wife, Sara are leaders with the Thomasville community and area tractor club, and are active with various dairy programs as well.

Sara is a member of the 4-H advisory committee extension's executive committee and during the annual meeting was elected to the office of second vice-president of the extension committee. Almost since the 4-H center was built in the early 1970's, Sara has helped supervise the kitchen, taking charge of the many banquets and meetings served there each year. Often, other members of the family assist in preparation and service.

All three of the Eisenhart children have been enthusiastic 4-H members and outstanding in various project accomplishments. Tim, the oldest, is presently serving with the U.S. armed forces, stationed in Hawaii. Nancy, a former 4-H dairy foods state winner, was the county's 1982-83 dairy princess. Susan, the youngest, is an avid dairy showman in the youth and open Jersey breed classes and is treasurer of the 4-H county council.

The Rodney and Sara Eisenhart family received York Extension's first-ever award for outstanding Extension family. From the left are county agent Tony Dobrosky, extension president Bob Rebert and Sara and Sue Eisenhart.

A second surprise award went to county agent Tony Dobrosky, who recently completed 25 years of service with Extension. In honor of that quarter-century mark, he was presented an official "Penn State rocking chair," awarded by James McKeehen, assistant director of PSU's Southeast Region.

Special recognition went to The York Dispatch, for the newspaper's support and assistance in informing the public of extension programs and events. Recently, the York-based evening daily sponsored a supplement programs and events. Recently, the York-based evening daily sponsored a supplement detailing the gamut of extension assistance available and profiles on the staff. Reporter Sheila Irwin represented the newspaper in accepting recognition from the extension committee.

A $3,000 grant from Branch 8080 of the Lutheran Brotherhood firm was presented to 4-H agent Roxanne Price. The funding from the fraternal insurance firm is

Centreport milk haulers near 3rd decade

BY ROBIN PHILLIPS
Staff Correspondent

CENTERPORT — A public notice was printed in the local paper in July, 1965: "Notice is hereby given that application will be made to the Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania by Paul S. Phillips, John H. Jacoby, Nicholas J. Kopicz, Rufus Z. Bashore, John E. Yoder, ... for the charter of an intended cooperative agricultural association to be known as the Centreport Milk Hauling Cooperative."

It was a modest beginning back then and one that took a lot of thought by those five Centre Township dairymen. But, with their stoic determination accompanying a handful of shippers and three can trucks in the beginning, these five men have watched their little co-op grow to 100 members and seven modern tank trucks, hauling over 76 million pound so fmilk in 1983.

"It snowballed," explained Rufus Bashore on the eve of the 19th annual meeting of the cooperative.

"All of a sudden he quit," (meaning the previous hauler) Bashore said.

The newly-formed co-op had to pick up milk sooner than it had planned since the previous hauler was very upset with the new organization being formed and "dropped us like a hot potato."

Not liking some of the new regulations of the hauler, dairymen had been having problems with him-one of the reasons behind the new cooperative. At that time, milk was still shipped in cans.

It was back-breaking work, lifting those cans in and out of coolers and in and out of trucks, remembers Paul Phillips. One of the new regulations facing the dairymen was to have the cans out of the cooler waiting to be picked up by the hauler. Although this was much easier on the hauler, it resulted in warm milk and higher bacteria counts. Cans were left at farms and disputes with the hauler became common.

"We decided then we were going to form a co-op," Bashore said.

Paul Phillips was one of the first advocates of the co-op. "We had meetings and meetings and meetings," Phillips stated. "A lot of these guys were skeptical, but we were determined to haul our own milk,"

These five dairymen were able to recruit neighbors and friends from the Centreport-Mohrsville area for a charter membership of 35 producers. With a $25.00 membership fee, three can trucks were purchased and drivers hired. The first membership meeting was held on August 12, 1965 and the five initial dairymen made up the board of directors and officers. All members shipped to Lehigh Valley Dairy and were from Centre and Penn Townships.

"We had rough sailing for the first couple of years," Phillips stated. "We did a log of running around." The directors looked at trucks, toured dairy plants, and drove the trucks themselves when there were problems.

From July to September that first year, 4,044,177 pounds of milk were hauled to Lehigh. The first full year in business, 1966, showed 6,049 tons of milk hauled to the dairy. Members were assessed per hundredweight, as they are today.

"The directors felt as long as we could meet our expenses, we weren't out to make a profit," John Jacoby explained. Milk pickups were tallied and members were charged what was needed for expenses.

Even with the low hauling charges, Centreport Mike Hauling Cooperative purchased its first bulk tank truck in April, 1966 and began bulk pickup.

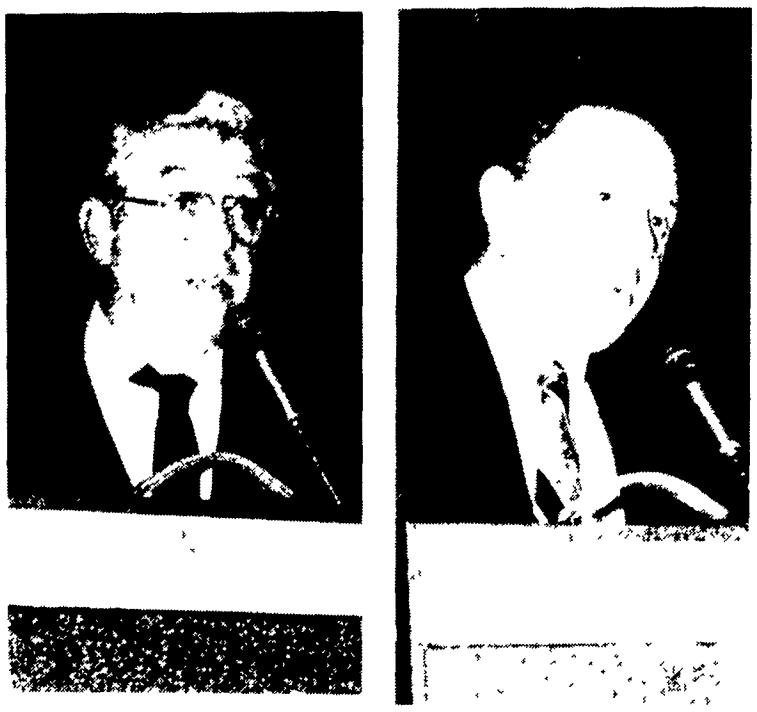
"At first," Phillips explained, "we had so little milk, they couldn't take a sample."

In June, 1968, the dairy stopped accepting cans. Although some members discontinued dairying because they did not want to install a bulk tank, and membership sank to 30, the Centreport co-op continued to haul milk for 24 cents to 26 cents a hundredweight. A second tanker was added in 1969, third and fourth in 1978, the fifth in 1979, the sixth in 1982, and the seventh added in November of 1983.

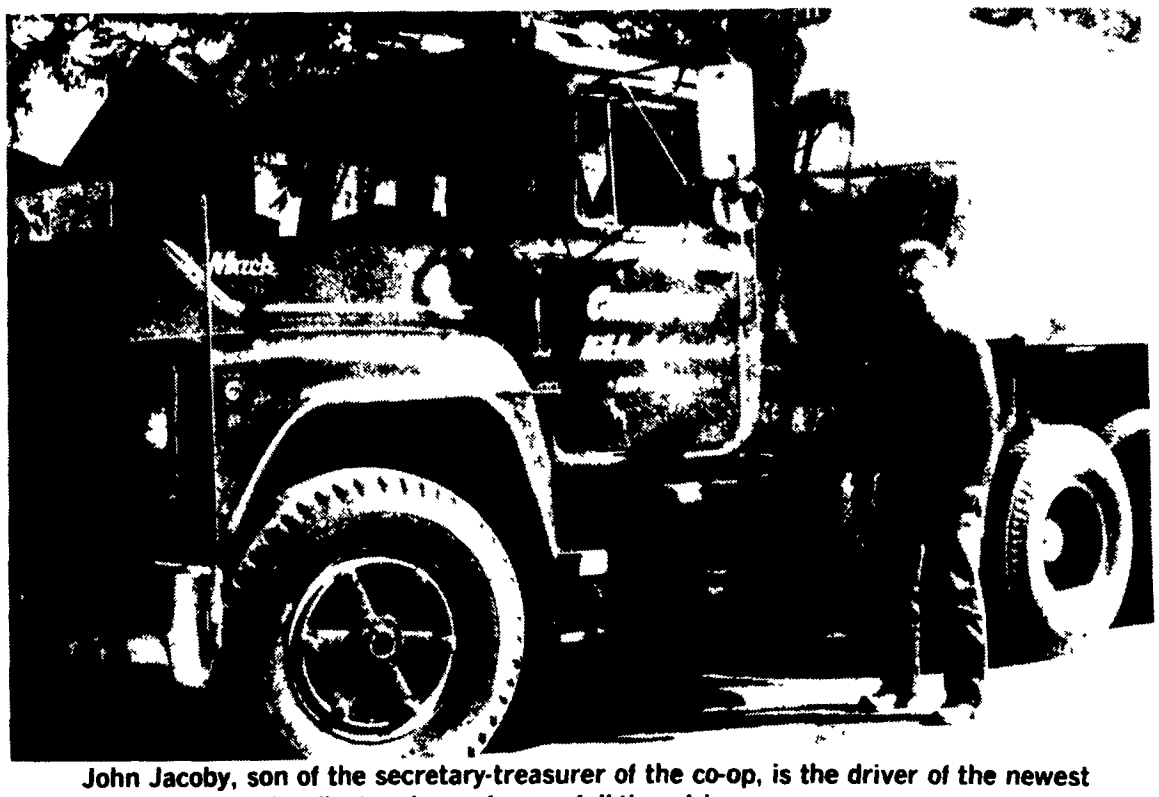
"The big boom in membership came in 1976," Jacoby stated. He remembers someone saying at a meeting: "if Centreport could haul milk for 30 cents, why can't the others?" Centreport was hauling for six to eight cents below the other haulers, paying all their bills, and increasing their assets to the full advantage of its members.

More producers joined in 1979 when Lehigh discontinued its hauling trucks.

Four of the five original dairymen who started the Centreport Co-op in 1965 include, from the left, John Jacoby, R1 Mohrsville; Rufus Bashore, R1 Mohrsville; Nicholas Kopicz, R1 Mohrsville; and Paul Phillips, Centreport.



Roy Hetrick, left, director with Lehigh Valley Cooperative; and Bernard Morrissey, insurance agent who discussed antibiotic contamination coverage, were among speakers at the 19th annual meeting of the Centreport Co-op.



John Jacoby, son of the secretary-treasurer of the co-op, is the driver of the newest addition to the tanker fleet and one of seven full-time drivers.

Today, the co-op employs seven full time drivers and seven substitutes. They drive seven tankers throughout Berks, Lebanon, and Schuylkill counties. From 100 members, over 76.5 million pounds of milk is hauled annually, making up approximately one-tenth of the total volume of milk at Lehigh Valley Dairy.

The current rates are still some of the lowest to be found. In addition to the low rates, Centreport does not charge a milkhouse stop fee, usually $2.00, and has no fuel adjustment clause. (as fuel prices rise do does the hauling fee) According to John Jacoby, secretary-treasurer of the co-op for 19 years, this keeps the bookkeeping simple which keeps expenses down.

"Most fellows don't know what those milk house stops mean anyway," he said.

The 19th annual meeting held on March 23 at the Tulpehocken Church, Richland, also brought another advantage to members. In a unanimous vote, the bylaws were changed to reduce the membership fee from $25.00 to $5.00. Any current member who had paid the $25.00 will get the $20.00 refunded to him. This will be reimbursed at the same time that the dividend funds are sent.

Jacoby explained that the co-op is in fine shape and the higher membership fee is no longer needed. He also stated that one of the competitors is using this fee against the cooperative to get more members.

Centreport Milk Hauling Cooperative's current board of directors include: Donald Landis, R1 Myerstown, president; Nicholas Kopicz, R1 Mohrsville, vice president; John Jacoby, R1 Mohrsville, secretary-treasurer; Willard Stauffer, R1 Womelsdorf; Phares Musser, R1 Newmanstown; John Krall, Lebanon; and Richard Hoffman, R1 Bernville. Nicholas Kopicz and John Jacoby have served on the board since the charter and are the only two of the original five members left with the cooperative.

Rufus Bashore's son has taken over his operation in the Mohrsville area and Paul Philips' sons have started their own dairies in the Centreport area.

Roy Hetrick, director, Lehigh Valley Cooperative Farmers, spoke at the meeting and fielded questions from the audience. "Lehigh does need more milk," he stated. He pointed out the new antibiotic policy of the dairy. Instead of the penalty system previously imposed, farmers are not responsible for insurance to cover the cost of any damaged milk.

"We're the people who put those antiobiotics in those cows, let's see that it stays out of that milk," he said.

He was questioned by President Landis on whether it was necessary for Centreport to haul so much milk to the Lansdale plant. "It's costing us 1000 gallons a month more fuel," Landis stated. Hetrick explained that all haulers are treated equally by loads and because of the Baltimore plant,

Pa. Century Farm total reaches 845

HARRISBURG — Twenty-seven farms were designated official Pennsylvania Century Farms during 1983, bringing the total number of Century Farms in the commonwealth to 845, according to Penrose Hallowell, State Agriculture Secretary.

Hallowell said, "The Century Farms Program was established to help publicize the strengths and durability of our farm families which have contributed so much to our commonwealth's economic and agricultural heritage. For more than 200 years our farm families have kept Pennsylvania growing better, as the leading agricultural state in the Northeast. Our 59,000 farm families produce more than $3 billion annually in farm products and help make agriculture Pennsylvania's number one industry."

To be recognized as a Century Farm by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, the farm must be owned by the same family for 100 consecutive years to the date of application, and a family member must presently live on the farm. The farm must consist of at least ten acres of the original holding.

The Secretary urged other Pennsylvania farm families who qualify for the Century Farm honors to make application for the program and "show your Keystone Pride."

Garber wins Guernsey outstanding youth award

Gerald Garber

LANCASTER — Gerald Garber, the 20-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Garber of R2, Willow Street, is the 1984 District II recipient of the American Guernsey Cattle Club's (AGCC) Outstanding Guernsey Youth Award.

Garber is employed on his family's 200-acre farm, Willows Farm, with 63 milking Guernseys and a custom silo-filling business.

"Eventually my brother and I plan to take over my father's farm," he said, indicating plans to remodel the barn in 1985.

Chosen to be included in Who's Who Among American High School Students, Garber has earned a state FFA degree, three FFA proficiency awards and was named his chapter's star farmer.

Two of Garber's cows have produced 305-day lactations over 20,000 pounds of milk, with another cow that has over 17,000M appraised 90 points.

Garber uses the top 10 active-AI sires or young bulls from sire-proving programs, with corrective mating practices followed when selecting mates. He is active in all aspects of the farming operation, but "fortunately my main responsibility and enjoyment is working with Guernseys," he said. "Since graduation my father has given me the opportunity of managing our herd."

In addition to showing animals successfully at county, district and state shows, Garber has topped judging contests and been an officer of the Pennsylvania Junior Guernsey Breeders' Association, FFA, 4-H and church groups.

"I hope that by keeping informed, making careful decisions and breeding selections that the Willows Farm can continue as a top-producing, top-quality Guernsey herd," he said.

Garber represented Pennsylvania in the national AGCC Outstanding Youth Contest. He and the other district winners were honored on March 25 at the AGCC Convention in Louisville, Kentucky.

Avian flu Q & A session scheduled at Gettysburg

GETTYSBURG — Poultry producers with questions concerning avian flu should plan to attend a question and answer session with Dr. Gerald Fichter, USDA Task Force Director.

Sponsored by the Adams County Extension Service, the meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m., on April 9, at the Vo-Ag department of the Gettysburg Senior High School.

Centreport Milk Hauling Co-op

more milk is needed there. "But there are new accounts coming in," he said.

Bernard C. Morrissey of Morrissey Insurance, Inc., was also on hand to discuss the insurance aspects of the new antibiotic policy.

"Good management is your secret to handling the antiobiotic problem," Morrissey stated.

Most larger farm insurance agencies do include a product liability clause to protect a dairyman from negligence, according to Morrissey. But, Morrissey continued, "each claim is taken on its own merit," "Normally, if you are negligent, you made the mistake, you will be covered for the product in the tank truck, less your milk." "It's very questionable. You should talk to your agent," he concluded.

The banquet room was filled with dairymen on March 23 as they took part in the functions of their co-op.

"When you belong to a coop, you are actually hauling your own milk," Jacoby stated.

From the determination of several neighbors, Centreport Milk Hauling Cooperative proved what can be accomplished when farmers band together. "We have good cooperation," Jacoby stated. "The directors were determined to keep it together and there has never been a sqabble."

Tandem disk rates best for blending herbicides in soil

UNIVERSITY PARK — In an update report on weed control, the tandem disk still appears to be the best tillage tool for blending herbicides into the soil. The report comes from Nathan L. Hartwig, research agronomist at Penn State.

In their experiments, Hartwig and associates used fluorescent dye to determine the most efficient tillage tools for blending herbicides into the soil.

"For best control, the herbicide should be in the soil surrounding the seed, nutlet, or rhizome when germination or growth is under way," he affirmed.

The tandem disk did an excellent job of incorporating the herbicide down to 3 inches following a plow and tandem disk. Blending into the soil was also excellent down to 3½ to 4 inches after a chisel plow, and equally effective down to 4½ to 5 inches after plowing.

Control of annual grass and yellow nutsedge was good with the tandem disk. Hartwig said this tool seems to be best where both shallow-germinating annual grasses and deeper-germinating yellow nutsedge are problems.

"It appears," Hartwig noted, "that the rougher the surface to which the test dye was applied, the deeper the incorporation."

"If we look at trends, improvement in control of annual grass was generally better in plowed ground than on chisel-plowed or heavy-disked ground, regardless of the incorporation tool used," he said.

Incorporation of herbicide with a cultimulcher was very good down to 2 inches with the herbicide applied after a single tandem disking on plowed ground.

Mixing of herbicide into the soil with a spring tooth harrow was shallow, 1 to 2 inches. However, annual grass control was still very good. The spring tooth harrow was not used where yellow nutsedge was a problem.

The heavy disk resulted in uneven incorporation, and there was a concentration of the test dye at the full depth of disk blade penetration. Control of annual grass and yellow nutsedge was fair when the disk was allowed to "float" or penetrate to its full depth. Annual grass and yellow nutsedge were controlled somewhat better when the disk was raised slightly so that it penetrated only 4 inches.

Avian Task Force awaits USDA decision

LANCASTER — A decision soon to be released by the USDA regarding the depopulation of low pathologic and serologically positive (antibody) birds is expected to accompany news of an upward adjustment in indemnity rates.

One new outbreak was reported on Sunday in a flock of 3,300 broiler breeders near Kleinfeltersville in Lebanon County. This was the first outbreak in 13 days, with no additional outbreaks since then.

Currently 102 flocks have been repopulated with 5.9 million birds, with only two reinfections recorded to date.

Although the quarantine zone in Maryland may be dropped within the next two weeks, one infected flock of 10 to 12-week-old pullets discovered in Mathias, West Virginia, on Tuesday will probably cause an expansion of the Virginia quarantine zone.

McLaughlin adopted last October had a filly by her side, and was in foal again, a kind of three-for-one-price deal.

In just five weeks from the time she took her mare home, Mrs. McLaughlin was riding the animal, and believes she could have done so even sooner. The filly, now about eight months old, will begin her training later this summer, at yearling age.

So impressed with his wife's horse was Mr. McLaughlin that he sold his own domestic mount in order to instead adopt either a wild mare or a stallion that he will have gelded.

While Frank Goodlander is up at the corral visiting with potential adopters, his wife Doris, manages the adoption center office, interviewing adoption candidates and handling the paperwork involved in the process.

Potential adopters must fill out an application and submit it along with a $25 non-refundable deposit, which will later be applied to the $215 cost of a horse, or $140 for a burro, if they choose to adopt.

While there is an abundance of horses, burros are in short supply. A waiting list of burro adopters now includes 95 names of people interested in acquiring a descendant of these gold-rush-era pack animals.

The BLM, which oversees the horse adoption program, operates several adoption centers, but with only two of them located in the East. In addition to the Lewisberry facility, a similar one is operating in Cross Plains, Tennessee.

Because wild horses and burros on public rangelands in eight states are protected by law, herd sizes have continued to increase, and many face possible starvation in the areas where they compete with wildlife and domestic livestock for limited forages.

The estimated 60,000 wild horses and burros populating the rangelands are far in excess of the optimal 24,000 that the Bureau has estimated can be supported on the land and feed available.

"There are over 25,000 excess wild horses and 40 wild burros presently in corrals out West waiting to be shipped to adoption centers," says G. Curtis Jones, Jr., Director of the BLM's Eastern States Office. "Nevada corrals alone had over 1,400 animals which were gathered last summer and fall, to help avoid overgrazing and possible starvation."

As horses are rounded up from the rangelands, temporary corrals set up handle the herds, often in canyons where they can be more easily directed and contained. Both heliocopters and wranglers on horseback move the wild horses into the corrals, where they are freeze-branded, wormed and given a full battery of protective vaccinations.

When they arrive at adoption centers, the animals are again checked by veterinarians. At Lewisberry, each horse received an injection of tetramycin as a preventive against health problems that could be brought on by the stress of moving.

In spite of the availability of horses, adoption rates have fallen considerably over the winter.

A continuing problem in the East is boosting public awareness of the horse adoption program. To help increase public involvement and knwoledge of the program, and encourage larger numbers of adoptions, center managers like the Goodlanders have begun holding "satellite" adoption programs in distant areas.

On March 17, the Goodlanders held their first satellite center activity at Belleville. Of the 20 horses available at the one-day event, 13 found new owners on the spot. Four other interested individuals came to the Lewisberry center even before the satellite day, after reading of the program through pre-publicity, and additional inquiries are still coming in to the Center's office as a result.

A similar large-scale outreach adoption satellite is now in planning for Syracuse, New York, to be held later in the Spring. The Goodlanders expect to haul between 100 and 120 horses to the New York satellite program.

Up at the corral, Chris Corkle, oblivious to the activity around her, is still leaning against the hayrack. But now, just behind her on the far side of the feeding trough quietly stands the blaze-faced horse that has already captured a place in her heart.

Somehow, it almost seems as though these two youngsters from different sides of the country already know that they belong together.

Horses off the first shipment from the West to adoption center are shy and skittish at first buy hay in the feedrack helps them get over their initial fears.

Attendance at the more than 2,000 meetings called by 4-H leaders was over 30,500, and there was attendance of over 39,000 at meetings held by extension staffers.

Media participation included over 190 each of news articles and radio broadcasts, as well as 16 television broadcasts. Over 180,000 pieces of educational mail carried extension information to the public.

Roxanne Price, York County 4-H agent, accepts a $3,000 check from Branch 8080 of the Lutheran Brotherhood insurance firm. The grant, which will be used to help fund various 4-H events, was presented by branch president Dean Becker, left, and treasurer, Don Glatfelter.

Salisbury Township stresses soil conservation

BY JACK HUBLEY

WHITE HORSE — Despite high winds and driving rain, more than 50 Salisbury Township farmers turned out for a soil conservation meeting at the White Horse Fire Hall on Wednesday night.

Responding to the rising number of complaints registered by residents regarding water, soil and manure run-off on township roads, the supervisors invited conservation experts, to discuss the problem and possible solutions with local farmers.

Featured speakers were County Conservation District Administrator Robert Gregory, Pequea Valley High School vo-ag teacher Clair Witwer, Chairman of the County Commissioners Jame Huber, and Clifford Bienko of the Soil Conservation Service.

During opening remarks, Supervisor Les Houck warned that little will remain of the township's topsoil in 25 years if current farming practices are not upgraded

Clair Witwer pointed out some of the problem areas within the township with the aid of slides taken during the previous week's wet weather. Erosion problems were noted where fields had been plowed to the edges of roads, where intensive grazing had occurred on pasturelands, and where harvested corn fields were exposed to heavy spring rains.

Witwer concluded with measures that some farmers had taken to correct the problems, such as installing of grass waterways, terracing, and leaving an unplowed margin between crops and roads.

"We must think of our soil as a nonrenewable resource," began Bob Gregory, adding that it takes 300 years to generate one inch of topsoil, and the County is losing four million tons of topsoil annually.

In discussing no-till methods, Gregory stressed that one way of keeping soil on the farm is to keep some type of ground cover on the soil at all times. Gregory showed slides of adjacent corn test plots showing the superior water retention capabilities of no-till soil, and the resulting vigor of no-till corn even during the hot,dry summer months.

Cliff Bienko, with the Soil Conservation Service, gave a slide presentation reinforcing much of the information presented by Gregory and Witwer. He outlined a number of solutions to the run-off problem including grass waterways and raised pipe terraces.

The session's final guest speaker was Commissioner James Huber who stated that Lancaster County has lost one-half of its topsoil during the last 275 years. He called on farmers to adopt the practices endorsed at the meeting in an effort to stop the flow of precious farmland to the Chesapeake Bay.

In concluding remarks, Supervisor Houck asked those farmers who might be guilty of plowing into rural road right-of-ways to discontinue the practice. He stated that first-offenders would be served with a warning, followed by a fine for subsequent violations. The township's right-of-way extends 16½ feet from the center of the road.

Bob Gregory reminded farmers that the Mason-Dixon Program provides funds on a cost-sharing basis for conservation practices such as terracing, diversions, waterways, no-till planting and strip cropping.

Robert E. Gregory, Administrator for the Lancaster County Conservation District, tells Salisbury Township farmers that the County's topsoil is disappearing at an alarming rate.

NY farm organizations nominate dairymen for National Dairy Promotion and Research Board

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Representatives of 12 New York State farm organizations met at the Northeast Dairy Cooperative Federation (NEDCO) Office in Syracuse on March 7, to select three candidates for appointment to the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board. The nominees selected, all active dairy farmers, are: Leon Brown, Westtown, N. Y.; David Dodge, Woodville, N.Y.; and John Widger, Ellicottville, N.Y.

The organizations represented at the Syracuse meeting were: Agri-Mark Inc., Agway, Allied Federated Cooperatives, Dairylea Cooperative, Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative, Lehigh Valley Farmers Cooperative, National Farmers Organization, New York State Farm Bureau, New York State Grange, Niagara Milk Cooperative, Northeast Dairy Cooperative Federation, Oneida — Madison Milk Cooperative, and Upstate Milk Cooperatives. With the exception of National Farmer's Organization, who did not wish to make a commitment, all the organizations in attendance agreed to support the three nominees selected.

Leon Brown is a graduate of Rutgers University and a former vocational agriculture teacher for 25 years, is currently president of the Slate Hill Milk Producers Cooperative, and the Orange County Farm Bureau. He has been a director of NEDCO since 1976, serving as chairman of its education committee. Brown is also a member of the New York State Farm Bureau.

David Dodge is a graduate of Cornell University and taught vocational agriculture for six years. He operates a 150-cow dairy farm in Woodville, Jefferson County. He has served as president of the Jefferson County Farm Bureau, vice-chairman of the Dairy Committee of the New York Farm Bureau and as an Agway Committeeman, to mention a few of his civic activities.

John Widger, who operates a 310-acre dairy farm, is first vice president of the Dairylea Cooperative, president of O-AT-KA Milk Manufacturing Cooperative, director of Upstate Milk Cooperative, director of Milk for Health on the Niagara Frontier and director of the Dairy Council, Niagara Frontier.

The Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act of 1983, provides for the establishment of a National Dairy Promotion Program which will be administered by a 36 member board of dairy farmers nominated from 13 geographical districts, and appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture. New York State comprises one district and will have three directors on this National Board.

PFA legislative priorities

most emotional and likely most discussed by farmers – appears to be in trouble, at least for this year.

With the introduction of new Milk Security Fund legislation that is aimed at getting the bankrupt program back on sound financial footing, this ever-present economic threat to state dairymen is lessened.

"This has been a serious issue of the past two years," Eckel said, "and the new legislation should receive favorable action from the General Assembly."

Long-term, Eckel and the PFA launched an effort for farmland preservation before a joint session of the House and Senate ag committees the week before.

"We must make a long-term commitment to preserve farmland, not for a few years or a lifetime, but for generations to come, Eckel said.

"The key is a well-financed purchase of development rights program. All Pennsylvanians will benefit and all Pennsylvanians will need to share in paying for it."

And the third concern is the one that has been demonstrated by county associations along roadways throughout the state and one that becomes more emotional and personal because each and every member of a farm family has been contending with it on a growing basis.

That, of course, is the trash tossed along roads and into fields, particularly the beverage cans and bottles.

And while each farmer attending the conference likely related closest to this issue and probably brought it up more readily in Capitol contacts during the day, it is the proposed legislation calling for a mandatory deposit that seemingly is in the most stalled position at least for the moment.

The strong container and beverage lobby has apparently been pushing its loss-of-job leverage to the utmost, particularly in the western part of the state.

Eckel stood before the packed audience at the Penn Harris Motor Inn and traced the life span and costs of that trash, which can end up embedded in a tractor tire or the gut of a cow.

Holding up the paper sack:

"It takes three years for this to decompose."

Next, a steel can:

"This won't rot away until after five years."

An aluminum can:

"This takes 500 years to decompose."

Plastic container:

"Twelve to 17 years to disappear."

And finally a brown beer bottle:

Eckel estimated it costs Pennsylvania farmers some $37 million a year to contend with the cans, bottles and trash.

And, he reported, it costs state taxpayers $64.00 a mile to clean up highways and if that amount were projected for PennDOT over the entire road network, it would amount to some $3 million a year.

PFA urges rabies action

CHAMBERSBURG — The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) has urged the General Assembly to take measures to upgrade the state's diagnostic and research facilities to meet the deadly threat of rabies which is spreading in southcentral Pennsylvania.

At a hearing of the House Committee on Health and Welfare today, PFA spokesman John Stoner of Mercersburg, Franklin County, said, presently, "...our diagnostic and prevention services are so overloaded that we no longer have an accurate way to track the spread or seriousness of the disease."

He added, "The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania's diagnostic facilities can no longer test all rabies suspect animals and now limit testing to cases where a person is actually bitten. If we are serious about controlling rabies in Pennsylvania and protecting the citizens of our state from this disease we must upgrade our diagnostic and research facilities."

Stoner, a dairyman and hog producer, noted that Pennsylvania has experienced an average of two new cases of rabies in domestic animals and wildlife each day this year. He noted that eight members of his family and five neighbor children required a costly four-week series of rabies prevention shots last summer because of exposure to a rabies-suspect cat. "It is easy to see why both I and the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association are concerned about the rabies situation in Pennsylvania," he said.

PFA also expressed support for the concepts contained in legislation, H B 1700, which would require all dogs in the state to be vaccinated against rabies. PFA has policy calling for vaccination of all dogs and also recommending that proof of vaccination be required before licensing.

Crop insurance deadline

LANCASTER — April 15 is the last day to apply for crop insurance for corn, grain sorghum, oats, soybeans, and tobacco, according to William G. Foose, District Director for the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation.

Crop Insurance covers unavoidable loss of production resulting from adverse weather conditions, wildlife, earthquake, or fire.

"Three coverage levels (50, 66, or 75 percent) are available for insurance protection. Additionally, FCIC offers three optional price elections for valuing production lost or damaged," says Foose.

"To assist producers, the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation will cost-shore up to 30 percent of the cost of carrying insurance. For more information about the program, producers should contact an authorized crop insurance agent," says Foose.

To select an agent, producers should check the list of agents available at their county ASCS office. Applications should be submitted to the sales agent no later than April 15.

NFU elects new head

In accepting the position of NFU President, Carpenter said agriculture as a whole and the organization face many challenges. To meet them, he said a strong coalition must be forged between farmers, seniors, workers, consumers, and cooperatives.

"We must be both forthright and forceful in sharing information and discussion on these conditions, with supporters and adversaries, as we provide direction and make clear our commitment that "tomorrow" will indeed be a better tomorrow for farm families and their cooperatives than that which we are caused to accept today." he said.

NEW ORLEANS, La. — Delegates to the National Farmers Union convention March 11 through 14 have elected Minnesotan Cy Carpenter as its president. Carpenter had served as chairman of the national general farm organization's executive committee for three years and had been a member of its board of directors since 1971. He currently serves as president of the Minnesota Farmers Union.

Having grown up on a family farm, Carpenter has been a champion of family agriculture, farmer owned cooperatives and rural America and is a nationally known spokesman for those causes.

Pa. Bred Heifer Sale averages $1,626 per head

BY LAURA ENGLAND

HARRISBURG — For dairymen seeking quality breeding stock to supplement already established or beginning herds, the Pa. Holstein Bred Heifer Sale held Thursday night at the Farm Show Building was the place to be.

The 84 head sold averaged $1,626 for a total of $136,600. The fairly constant bidding throughout the sale provided the opportunity to buy quality heifers at reasonable prices, and as one farmer put it, "it was a buyer's sale."

Leading the way as high seller was a fancy Ivanhoe Bell daughter which sold for $3,900. The June 1982 heifer, Tender-Touch Bell Ringer, was consigned by Darrel A. Mills, Lancaster. Steve Hoover and Barry Garner, Martinsburg, were the buyers.

Bred to SWD Valiant and due to calve in October, the heifer is the daughter of Spring-Belle Sophie, a very good cow with five lactation records over 20,000 pounds of milk with 3.3 percent and above fat tests.

The second and third high selling heifers each sold for $3,100.

David Shutzman, Berlin, was the buyer of the first of these two heifers, Walebe Milkmaster Teer. An April 1982 heifer, Teer was consigned by Walebe Partners and EmTran, Lancaster.

4-H, FFA dairy judging slated at Penn State

UNIVERSITY PARK — Dairy Science Club members at Penn State are getting ready for their major event of the year — the 59th Annual Dairy Exposition. Spread over several weeks in April, the exposition features judging contests next Saturday, the Penn State Dairy Princess Contest April 18, and "Show Day" April 28 featuring fitting and showing contests.

The judging contest set for Saturday, April 7, will feature 4-H and FFA clubs from throughout the state. Chairperson Alan P. Kozak, Penn State senior in dairy production from Washington, and assistant chairman William Zollers, junior in dairy production from Mertztown, will bring together 12 official judges to place classes and score oral reasons.

The judges are all Penn State alumni working in the dairy field. Included are Jeffrey Harding of Brookville; David Castrogiavanni of Montrose; Lloyd Pease, Dale Oliver, Carl Anderson, and Richard Hess of Lancaster; Warren Poage of State College; Richard Packard and Steven Neely of Wilkes-Barre; and James McMurray of West Alexander — with two more to be appointed.

The judging contest will be comprised of four divisions: 4-H, FFA, collegiate amateur, and collegiate professional.

Registration April 7 begins at 9:3 a.m. at the Dairy Barns at University park, with the contest starting at 10:00 a.m.

Contestants will judge eight classes representing the five major breeds — Ayrshire, Brown Swiss, Guernsey, Holstein, and Jersey. 4-H and FFA members will give oral reasons for two classes, while professional collegiate members will give reasons for four classes. Amateur collegiate members will not have reason classes.

All contestants will be given 12 minutes to judge "place only classes" and 15 minutes for reason classes.

Individual and team winners in each division will receive awards at the conclusion of the Dairy Exposition at an awards banquet April 28, sponsored by the Dairy Science club.

Any interested 4-H and FFA clubs who were not contacted may register the day of the contest for an entry fee of $3.00 per person. 4-H participation is limited to eight contestants per county and only eight contestants per school for FFA participation.

Fire sweeps Bucks County farm

BY JACK HUBLEY

QUAKERTOWN — Aided by strong winds, a fire swept through the Bucks County farm of C. Wilmer Mood and family early last Saturday morning, causing an estimated $200,000 damage to buildings, equipment, feed and livestock.

Originating in faulty wiring leading to a mercury vapor security light, the fire began on one end of a 100-cow dairy barn housing Windy Spring Farm's Arctic Cat snowmobile business.

Fire from the 30 exploding snowmobile gas tanks ignited the surrounding meadow grass and quickly spread to an adjacent 120-foot, two-story barn housing livestock.

About 18 cows and calves in Mood's beef operation died in the blaze, with an additional five animals destroyed later due to lung damage.

Awakened shortly before one a.m. by a call from tenants Elizabeth and Jeff Weierbach, also residing on the farm, Mood turned off the electricity and rushed to the barn. Succeeding in opening one door, Mood glanced over his shoulder to see the house roof ablaze. Situated some 300 feet downwind of the two barns, the home's wooden shingle roof was quickly ignited by flaming debris.

Mood turned from the barn and ran back to his house, leading his wife, Donna, and four children, ages three to nine, to safety.

Attempts by the Weierbachs to gain access to the livestock were unsuccessful, and resulted in Mrs. Weierbach being treated for smoke inhalation.

Firemen from Milford Square as well as five other companies arrived at the scene, 1½ miles north of Spinnerstown on Myers Road, in time to halt the fire's advance on the home and Mood's grain dryer, and finally gained control of the blaze after a three hour battle.

Structures destroyed or damaged in addition to the two barns include a milk house, wooden silo, and a storage shed located on the opposite side of Myers Road.

Equipment and other losses include two tractors, two tractor-mounted sprayers, a grinder-mixer, more than 400 bales of hay and straw, seed supplies, and about four tons of feed.

"I thank God for the safety of my family," Mood said, adding that friends, neighbors and local churches have done much to ease the impact of the disaster.

In addition to Windy Spring Farm's beef cow/calf operation and snowmobile business, Mood plants the farm's 110 acres, as well as an additional 400 acres, in corn, soybeans, wheat and hay crops.

Manheim Farm Show auction scheduled next Saturday

MANHEIM — Heading the list of consignments at next Saturday's Manheim Farm Show Benefit Auction are two Farmall tractors, which are being repaired, renovated and repainted by vo-ag students and FFA members at the high school.

The tractors, a Farmall H and Farmall M, were acquired by the Farm Show Commission from Evergreen Tractor, Lebanon.

The FFA'ers performed some minor repairs and prepared the tractors for a new coat of bright red paint.

"It provides a good opportunity for the students to work on equipment and some good selling items for our sale to benefit the Farm Show, explains Marlin Becker, sale chairman.

Chuck Bechdel, vo-ag teacher at Manheim, paid tribute to the students, particularly the juniors, who have been working on the tractors.

In addition, a number of the FFA'ers will also be donating six hours of their time to the slave auction at the sale. Bidders can buy six hours of labor from FFA members who volunteer themselves.

In the past, bidders have paid as much as $95.00 for a "slave" in the auction.

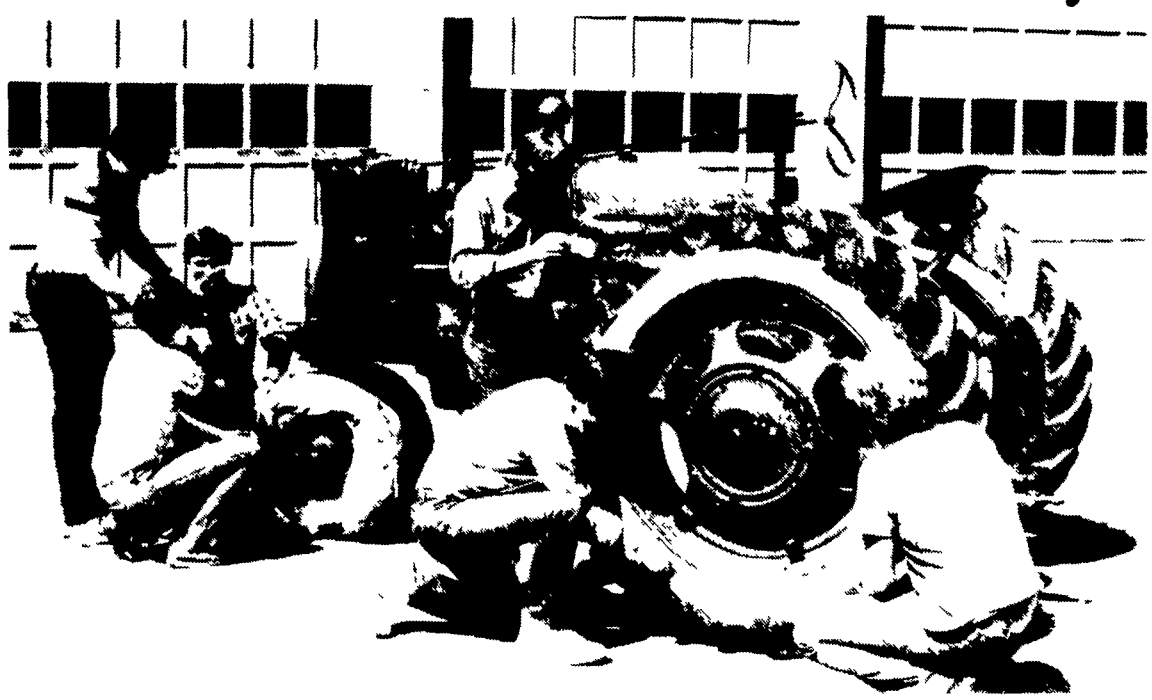
Other popular items at the past two auctions have been specially-baked commemorative cakes, which have commanded top bids of $100 and $150.

Other items of equipment at this year's sale include a Ford 8N Massey Harris manure loader, plow, Deere corn planter, 5-bar hay rake, walking plow and riding mowers. Other items range from feed to furniture, saws to shrubs, and tools to tile. A complete ad can be found in this week's Lancaster Farming.

Proceeds from the sale are put toward reducing the debt on the 60 by 180-foot pole barn that is used for the Farm Show and other community activities throughout the year.

Last year's sale netted some $6,000 for the benefit of the Farm Show.

The sale begins at 9:30 a.m. next Saturday, April 7, with the slave auction scheduled at 1 p.m.



Manheim vo-ag students and FFA members prepare a Farmall M tractor for a new coat of paint prior to its sale at next Saturday's Farm Show Benefit Auction. From the left, they include Ken Hawkins, Bryan Balmer, Randy Kreiser, Matt Pflieger, Ken Nolt and Russ Zellers.

Management of young calves calls for special attention

UNIVERSITY PARK — For most Pennsylvania dairy farmers, the best genetic material available for improving the herd in in the form of calves and heifers. With the increasing use of high PD bulls, calves and heifers are becoming more and more valuable assets to dairy farmers.

The problem is that until they freshen, calves and heifers are non-paying animals on the farm. Since they do not provide a milk check currently, they often receive less care and attention than does the milking herd. It has been proven that improving youngstock health practices pays off in the future milking herd.

Many vaccines are available for use on dairy farms in Pennsylvania for replacements. Some of the most commonly used vaccines are brucellosis, IBR, P13, Roto-corona, and colibaccillosis vaccine.

All heifer calves should be vaccinated for brucellosis when they are four to eight months of age. Pennsylvania has recently been declared a Brucellosis-free state and it is important that this status be maintained. It is also a good idea to vaccinate all replacement heifers at least once for IBR (infectious bovine rhinotracheitis). Six to eight months of age is a good time to do this because maternal immunity has disappeared by that age. In herds with widespread respiratory infection in young calves, a nasal vaccine to protect against IBR may be given to calves as early as two weeks of age. Parainfluenza, or P13 protection is usually provided in the same vaccine as the IBR.

Other vaccines are available for herd replacements, but the specific needs of each farm should be discussed with a veterinarian. Some available vaccines are Bovine Virus Diarrhea (BVD), Pasturella, Haemophilus, Leptospirosis, Vibriosis, and Clostridia.

Parasites, both internal and external, can also be serious problems affecting the growth and performance of dairy heifers at any age. The control of internal parasites in young calves requires careful attention to clean management practices.

Young calves should be housed individually to eliminate contact with infested animals or manure until at least one week after weaning. Always avoid exposing young calves to areas where manure contamination from older animals can occur. Calf facilities should be kept free of manure. Most herds require a routine treatment program for young calves from weaning to eight months of age.

Serious parasite problems are most likely to occur during a calf or heifer's first season on pasture. These animals have little or no resistance to digestive tract parasites. Parasite eggs overwinter on pastures in Pennsylvania. These eggs hatch into larvae in the spring and are eaten by calves and heifers. Heifers on pasture can be heavily infested with parasites by early to mid-summer. Parasitized heifers grow more slowly, are less feed efficient, may develop diarrhea and may become anemic. Strategic worming at three and six weeks after turnout on pasture will greatly reduce the degree of parasitism.

External parasites that should be of concern to dairy farmers in Pennsylvania are: lice, mange mites, and flies. These can all reduce growth and performance of calves and heifers. To reduce the spread of these parasites, farmers should prevent direct contact between age groups of heifers and clean all pens thoroughly before putting a new group of animals in a pen. Check with a veterinarian or county extension agent for names of currently approved insecticides.

Sanitation and good management are just as important as drugs in a calf and heifer parasite control program, as well as overall health care, and should be considered.

Bottle, can collection held in York

COLLINSVILLE — Thirty farmers divided into a quarter-mile stretch of road frontage equals seven bags of trash.

That's the sum of the York County Farmer's Association's anti-litter "protest" staged last week on the Dwight Taylor farm, along Route 74 south of Red Lion. The roadside rally was part of a state-wide drive by the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association to move the Bottle Bill out of committee and into the state Senate and Legislative chambers for action.

Braving early morning cold, whipping winds, the trash protestors stalked the litter along Taylor's quarter-mile stretch of alfalfa acreage bordering the most heavily-traveled highway in the southeastern part of the county.

In the 15 minutes or so that it took for the group to cover the distance, seven feed bags were filled with broken bottles, flattened plastic jugs, crumpled soft drink and beer cans, pieces of wire and metal and other miscellaneous unwanteds tossed away by careless motorists.

"I think the most disgusting thing I've every found along here was a plastic bag full of used, disposable baby diapers," recalls the dairy farm owner, who goes through this pick-up process before every cutting of alfalfa taken from the field, or about four times each season.

While Taylor purchased the farm some 26 years ago, he says that it has just been in the last decade that trash began to be such a problem.

"When we bought it, my father-in-law suggested that buying land with road frontage would be a real plus. But as far as this trash situation goes, road frontage has been a real minus," adds a frustrated Taylor.

He does remember two instances in which money was found during pick up sessions. Taylor once found five dollars, while his daughter was fortunate enough to spot a ten dollar windfall. Still, for the wasted hours, the discarded feeds, the broken machinery, Taylor would trade that meager $15 for permanently clean fields any day.

Ellis Crowl, president of the county farmers group, recently experienced his own problems with trash. When his new tractor tire and a broken bottle made contact, it cost Crowl $80 to replace the damage.

"We're doing this (trash pickup) for every farmer!" Crowl attested. People find it difficult to throw money away, but find it extremely easy to throw away trash. We want to upgrade beverage bottles and cans from trash to something of value."

"The way to do that is to make beverage bottles and cans returnable by placing a deposit value on them."

As just one example of how trash can be turned to cash, — with a little incentive — Crowl cited the case of a nephew of his who recently earned $35 for a day of picking up discarded, cans for recycling from along rural highways near by.

Several York farmers were among a group who met earlier this week with state senators and legislators to discuss the status of the bottle bill and other issues of farm concern. — J.B.

Bull Sale rescheduled

UNIVERSITY PARK — Heavy snows on Thursday collapsed a sale tent and forced the postponement of Pennsylvania's 11th Performance Tested Bull Sale. Originally scheduled for Friday, March 30, at the Pa. Meat Animal Evaluation Center in State College, the sale has been rescheduled for 12:00 noon on April 6, at the same location.

Pa. Ayrshire holds annual spring meeting

BY BARB RADER
Staff Correspondent

CARLISLE — Highlighting the Annual Spring Pa. Ayrshire meeting at Embers Restaurant, Carlisle, was the announcement of the Outstanding Pa. 1983 Ayrshire Boy and Girl. Nancy Jo Mitrich, R1 Guys Mills and Kevin Field, R1 Sagertown, both Crawford Countians, were selected the winners, according to Barbara Rader, youth chairman.

Both winners, along with the 1982 Pa. girl winner, Heather Hernley, have submitted their entries on the National level. Twelve other contestants from across the United States are competing for the titles of National Boy & Girl. Hernley received word recently that she is one of the six finalists. From the three girls and three boys selected as finalists, one boy and one girl will be awarded this highest honor chosen at the National Convention April 5 at Columbus, Oh. Hernley presented her slide presentation, which she'll be showing before the National panel of judges.

Mitrich, 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nick Mitrich, is a June '83 graduate and presently employed as a designer in a florist shop. She has been a junior member of the National Ayrshire Association for 9 years. Her herd consists of six Ayrshires, which began as a 4-H project. She was active in 4-H and she presently is an FFA member.

Field, 16-year-old son of Mr. & Mrs. Robert Field, is still attending school. Purchasing his first Ayrshire in 1977, he didn't become a junior national member until last year. Field has won several champion honors with his Ayrshire and also participated in the junior milk/fat contest at Pa. Jr. Dairy Show.

Both of the state winners have been involved with promoting Ayrshires in the All-Breed Calf Sale held at the Crawford County Fairgrounds, Meadville. The youths both acknowledge fellow breeders and the state club for their help.

The contest is now open for 1984. Any junior member in Penna. may apply for a contest application by contacting the youth committee consisting of Rader, Box 216, Connoquenessing, 16027; John Ocker III, R5 Shippensburg 17257; Sandy Shetterly, Box 188, Millersburg 17061; Harold Kulp, 1096 Spice Road, Pottstown 19464 or the state secretary Milton Brubaker, 595 Snyder Road, Lititz 17543. Entries close on Jan. 15, 1985.

A "Scrapbook Contest" is being offered for the first time this year to all Pa. junior members. All youths, any age, may compile this year's activities, news related articles, photographs, project books, blue forms, etc., along with a junior Ayrshire story entitled "Me and My Ayrshires," in a scrapbook. Entires will be accepted until Jan. 15, 1985. Prizes will be awarded to all winners at the '85 annual meeting. The youth committee may be contacted for further information.

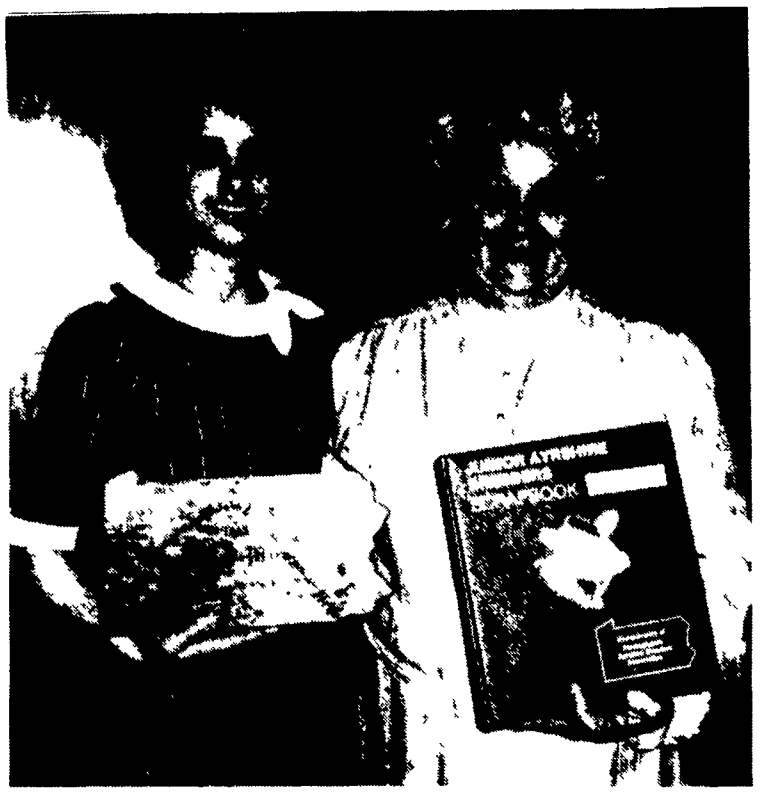
Rader also announced the milk/fat contest previously held during the Junior Dairy Show has been changed. It is now an open contest for all juniors to be able to participate. Rules will be patterned after the national milk/fat contest with Pa. winners being forwarded to the national competition. Deadline for this will be Feb. 1, 1985. Entries are to be sent to Mrs. Rader.

Youths will be taking part in the Spring Heifer/Calf Sale on April 21 at Bedford Fairgrounds. This promotion sale is sponsored by the state club solely to benefit youth in various Ayrshire activities across the state.

A junior and a senior team will be competing in the Junior Dairy Bowl Quiz April 4 during the National Convention. Team members are Heather Hernley, Wesley Harding Jr., Becky Alsdorf, Katrina Clevenger, Steven and Deborah Shetterly, Lona and Harold Rader Jr.

Georgia Barker, Ulysses, was cited as the owner of the All-American Senior Yearling Heifer winner. Her heifer was also Junior All-American winner. Harold Rader Jr. received HHM Two-Year-Old in the same contest.

Officers were re-elected to serve another year, including Harold Rader, president; John Ocker III, vice president and Milt Brubaker, secretary/treasurer. Directors were also retained, including Richard Lyons, Wilda Kline, J. Cletus Rhodes, Curt Sweinhart, Harold Kulp and Gregory Kilmer. Earl Keefer and Kulp will remain on the Pa. young sire committee. The youth committee also stays the same.



Nancy Jo Mitrich and her mother, Mrs. Nick Mitrich, with award-winning scrapbook and trophy as Outstanding Ayrshire Girl.

July 28 is field day at Lewis Thomas, R5 Ligonier. Various activities will be planned for the outing and all Ayrshire breeders are invited to attend the event.

Earl Keefer reported on the young sires and also the '86 National Convention. Committee chairmen have been notified and progress is being made in both functions. Holiday Inn, Grantville, is the site for the convention in late April. Pa. breeders are striving to make this convention the best ever.

Brubaker gave the sales reports, explaining that all sales held during 1983 were a financial success. He stated the second spring sale had 16 first-time buyers of Ayrshires and that 22 head were purchased for youth projects. Consignments are still needed for the sale and should be sent to Sherman Allen, R3 Conneaut Lake, 16316. Allen is managing the sale starting at noon on April 21 at Bedford Fairgrounds. Barb Weas, eastern area field representative, will read pedigrees and auction off the youths' "Anything Goes" items.

The proposed budget for 1984 given by Brubaker was accepted by the members.

Peter Davis, national executive secretary/treasurer, stated there is a budget deficit. He encourages all breeders to keep up-to-date registrations since most of the income comes from this area. The proposed selling of the associations office was not completed. The executive board of directors will be discussing the situation during the convention.

Davis encouraged all to attend the National Convention and Sale in Columbus, Ohio. He noted preparations of a good program, tours and sale consignments. He also commented that Earl Keefer, Pa. national convention chairman, has things well under way in preparing for 1986. Breeders should also keep in mind consignments for this top notch sale.

NEDCO signs 5-year milk distribution agreement

SYRACUSE, NY — The Northeast Dairy Cooperative Federation (NEDCO) has announced a 5-year packaged milk and dairy products distribution agreement with the Hogan Souhan Company of Auburg, NY, according to NEDCO General Manager Robert Forsythe.

The pact will put Hogan Souhan as the exclusive distributor of NEDCO labeled milk and dairy products throughout a nine-county area reaching from Lake Ontario on the north of the Pennsylvania border, Forsythe said.

"We're distributing in areas we've both been mutually involved in for many years," said Kenneth Davis, president of Hogan Souhan.

Davis said that he had been searching sometime for "a partner" to achieve better efficiencies. "We perceive ourselves as more of a distributor than a processor," he said.

In the agreement, NEDCO will supply and package milk under the Hogan Souhan label for over 300 accounts, which NEDCO will now serve, Davis explained. NEDCO will trailer the packaged milk to the Auburn depot, where it will be reloaded onto trucks for delivery.

Also included in the arrangement is the monthly distribution of 700,000 half-pints of NEDCO-labeled milk to several area schools and institutions. Both NEDCO and Hogan Souhan see an expanded market fo. cultured products, processed at NEDCO's Fraser, NY, milk manufacturing plant too.

Using Hogan Souhan as our delivery system should open up more Western Tier markets for our cottage cheese and sour cream, Forsythe said. He added, "though Hogan Souhan no longer processes milk, the plan is to begin processing NEDCO's Gold Coast brand orange juice in Auburn. This will free up our Fultonville operation to concentrate more extensively on packaging milk."

Both firms agree that the new distribution arrangement should allow the two to be more price competitive and to achieve a greater market share.

Farm Credit holds Stockholder's Meeting

BY JACK HUBLEY

LANCASTER A full schedule of meetings and workshops was planned for this week's three-day Annual Stockholder's meeting of the Farm Credit Banks of Baltimore

Among the 750 people attending the event at Lancaster's Host Farm and Corral were managers and directors of the Baltimore District's 26 affiliated Federal Land Bank and Production Credit Associations, directors of stockholding cooperatives, and the Bank's Board of Directors and senior officers

Meetings commenced on Monday afternoon, with Tuesday s schedule including five one-hour workshops on topics of interest to agricultural lenders

A workshop dealing with the 1985 Farm Bill was led by Dr Barry Flinchbaugh, Professor of Agricultural Economics at Kansas State University

Noting that economic policy is as important to agriculture as farm policy, the speaker asserted that the huge federal deficits are a knife in the gut to the American farmer Flinchbaugh called for declining real interest rates and warned that the current economic recovery may abort by 1985, ushering in another recession

Dr. Flinchbaugh's four-point plan for a sustained economic recovery begins with a 10 percent across-the-board cut in federal spending, including the military, which, in the professor's words, "has been written a blank check"

Turning to the subject of PIK, the speaker stressed that programs of PIK's nature have been around since 1933 and have always been ba[illegible] pro[illegible] ports, land retirement and stored reserves Flinchbaugh warned that our capacity to overproduce will be with us long after PIK has terminated

Turning his attention to the dairy industry, Dr Flinchbaugh stated that there is no way out of our record production and record government costs dilemma without culling cows and temporarily depressing the livestock industry

The future is bright for the dairy industry, Flinchbaugh asserted, but for less dairy farmers than we have now

Dr Flinchbaugh urged the Farm Credit System to help the economy by tightening lending policies

Also featured in one of the afternoon workshops was Dr David Kohl, Associate Professor of Agricultural Finance at Virginia Polytech, speaking on the changing agricultural picture and its implications for the Farm Credit System.

Dr Kohl labelled the 1970 s as the decade of inflation and noted a halt to the inflationary spiral in 1981 with a $20 billion decrease in agricultural assets

The speaker predicted a bimodal agriculture for the future, with a shift from intermediate size farms to both large commercial and small parttime operations.

Dr Kohl cautioned lenders that the current decade will experience a boom-bust ag economy similar to the previous decade, but without the benefit of inflation to cushion the blow.

Other afternoon workshop topics included computers and their use on the farm, by Joe Coffey, Director of Economics and Planning for the Southern States Cooperative. Coffey reviewed the computers currently available and provided an overview of their costs and capabilities.

Also scheduled was a discussion of Farm Credit's "Project 1995", an 18-month-long study aimed at predicting the financial services environment through the turn of the century.

Following a Wednesday morning meeting of directors and managers, lunch was served and The Stockholder's Meeting was adjourned.

Dr. Barry Flinchbaugh, Associate Professor of Ag Economics at Kansas State University, talks about the 1985 Farm Bill during Farm Credit's Baltimore District Stockholder's Meeting at the Host Farm, Monday through Wednesday.

Animals needed for Spring Ram Lamb Test

STATE COLLEGE — To date, only 32 ram lambs have been nominated for the Spring Ram Lamb Test, according to Edward Barben, Acting Director of the Pa Meat Animal Evaluation Center.

In order to conduct a meaningful test, Barben feels that at least 80 animals should be enrolled in the program.

In an effort to encourage more breeders to take part, the Center has extended the nomination deadline to April, 31. Barben said that at least 80 rams should be entered in order to conduct a valid test.

Interested breeders can obtain an application form by contacting Barben at the Meat Animal Evaluation Center, 651 Fox Hollow Rd., State College, Pa. 16801.

Rams should be delivered to the Center on May 8, accompanied by a veterinarian's health certificate. All animals must be registered with their respective national breed associations, and must weigh at least one-half pound per day of age.

During the 84-day test period the rams will be weighed every 14 days, and cared for by University veterinarians. A tentative ram sale date has been set for Sept. 1.

The purpose of the test is to promote performance testing in Pennsylvania, and to provide a genetically sound program for both large and small breeders.

Action teams help speed emergency loans to farmers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Stepped-up efforts to speed processing of applications for weather-related disaster loans for farmers who suffered losses on their 1983 crops are resulting in better service to farmers, a USDA official announced recently.

Michael E. Brunner, associate administrator of USDA's Farmers Home Administration, said special action teams have been assigned the task of spotting potential problem areas and recommending changes where needed. Teams have so far visited Iowa, Kentucky, Minnesota, Mississippi and Missouri. Other states will be visited as needed.

The special action teams are made up of FmHA specialists from the national office in Washington and from non-affected states. The teams visit agency county offices, review processing procedures, talk to farmers and determine if additional staffing or other support is needed.

Brunner said efforts to speed up processing include hiring and training temporary employees sending in specialists from other areas, authorizing overtime and streamlining the check-issuing system.

Efforts to inform farmers they may be eligible for emergency loans and to urge them to file their applications early to avoid the last-minute rush have been under way since the program started last September, Brunner said. Deadline for farmers to apply for disaster loans is six months after their county has been named eligible.

"Now the applications in many states are flooding in and we're working to get those checks out to farmers by planting time," he said. "We expect the action team to pin-point problem areas so we can speedily meet our commitment to provide needed assistance to farmers."

Agri-Learn funds donated

YORK — The South Central Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association believes that there is a need for increased education of young people about the agriculture industry.

To back up that philosophy, the beef producers and breeders have donated $500 to Agri-Learn, a third-grade curriculum study guide developed through the efforts of York Agri-Women, and written by former Dover High School vo-ag instructor William Fleet.

The $500 grant from the SCPCA will fund limited numbers of free copies of the Agri-Learn curriculum materials to interested elementary school teachers, administrators, and related childhood educators and leaders.

Agri-Learn's curriculum guides include lessons on various segments of agriculture, including beef, dairy, poultry, crops and horticultural production and relates in easily-understood examples how agriculture contributes to the overall domestic and world economy.

Limited free copies of Agri-Learn materials will be available by contacting York County extension agent Tony Dobrosky at the extension office, 112 Pleasant Acres Road, York, or Mrs. Gail McPherson, R.D. 1, New Park.

Walter Laird, president of the South Central Cattlemen's Association, presented a $500 check to Gail McPherson, coordinator for Agri-Learn. The grant from the cattlemen will make agriculture learning materials available free to elementary schools and related teaching institutions.

Hay meeting planned

TERRE HILL — The Eastern Lancaster County Adult Farmer Program will sponsor an educational meeting on Hay Preservatives on Wednesday at 7:30 p.m., at the Union Grove School.

The speaker for the evening will be Lester Vaugh, forage crop specialist from the University of Maryland. Vaugh has done some interesting research with the use of hay preservatives such as organic acids, anhydrous ammonia, and most recently with chemical driers. He will also be discussing the use of plastic bags to preserve silage in round bales.

Since much of the hay in the Northeast can be affected by weather damage, learning more about preserving the feeding value of our forages becomes important.

All interested persons are invited to attend. The Union Grove School is located near Terre Hill on route 625, 2 miles north of route 23. For additional information call the Adult Farmer Program office at 445-5041.

Md. tobacco pool suggested

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland Secretary of Agriculture, Wayne A. Cawley, Jr., met last week with Governor Harry Hughes, members of the Southern Maryland delegation to the General Assembly and Farm Bureau officials concerning this year's chaotic tobacco market conditions.

"We are faced with an extraordinary problem due to last year's drought on one hand and supply and demand factors on the other", Cawley reported to the group. The combination of these problems bearing down at one time may be more than individual farmers in Southern Maryland can deal with on their own this year", he said.

A possible marketing alternative designed to improve the situation was suggested by Cawley. It would consist primarily of a self-help program operated by the industry itself in which tobacco not sold in the market would be placed in a pool for marketing at a later date.

The program would be presided over by a group representing producers who would take charge of tobacco which farmers did not sell because of low bids or lack of bids on the auction floor.

Managers of the program, in cooperation with warehousemen and tobacco packers located in the state would implement a system for placing certain grades of tobacco into a pool which would work in the following manner.

Tobacco passed over by buyers or receiving bids deemed too low could then be placed in the pool holding area of the warehouse.

At the time a farmer voluntarily consigns his tobacco to the pool he would surrender outright control of it.

On a regular basis, pool tobacco would be moved from the warehouses to a cooperating packer's plant where it would be officially graded by USDA personnel and packed into large (800-1,000 pound) containers and then moved to holding storage at approved locations.

Pool tobacco would then be offered for sale with anyone eligible to find qualified buyers in the United States or abroad. Tenders from would-be buyers would be brought to the managing group which would consider them and accept or reject them.

As tobacco was sold from the pool, farmers with leaf in the pool would be paid on a pro rated basis.

All efforts would be made to keep overhead expenses involved in receiving, grading, packing and storing at low levels, helped, perhaps, by the volume involved.

Interested parties are requested to consider this suggestion and communicate their views to five Southern Maryland Farm Bureau presidents, Mr. Stuart Carr of the Maryland State Tobacco Authority, or Mr. Bradley H. Powers, Chief of MDA's Marketing Services Section as soon as possible.

"By no means is this a perfect plan and much needs to be worked out. That's why industry is needed," concluded Mr. Cawley.

Goatherders plan events

LEESPORT – The Goatherders organization of Berks County has announced its activities for April as well as important dates to remember for the coming months.

For starters, the Goatherders received an invitation from the Delaware Valley Milk Goat Assocation to attend a meeting April 8, at 1 p.m., at the Boyertown Borough Hall in Boyertown. The program's topic is "Dairy Goat Nutrition, Current Research and Practical Applications," which will be given by George F. Haelein of the University of Delaware. A question and answer period and refreshments will follow.

The Goatherders next meeting is scheduled for April 18, at 7:30 p.m., at the Berks County Agricultural Center. Berks County extension agent Clyde Myers will provide an update on mastits.

Upcoming events include participation in Ag Day, an annual event held on Penn Square, planned for Aug. 30 and 31. The event is sponsored by the Farm-City Council, with Clyde Myers as secretary.

Goatherders member Mary Ellen Spotts was invited to attend the committee's March 26 meeting, along with Myers. Members are asked to present any ideas concerning the type of display which the club should use during the April meeting.

Spotts also planned to attend a meeting March 30 with representatives from the Berks, Montgomery, Lehigh and Bucks [illegible] agriculture centers concerning the spring goat conference.

Goatherder Anne Ruth planned two club trips. On May 5, members are invited to visit Anne and Ralph Ruth's raw milk dairy. A visit to Donna Kennedy and Debbie Mikulak's wool processing operation is planned for June 2.

Potato stocks decrease

HARRISBURG — Total stocks of potatoes stored in Pennsylvania on March 1 were 1,350,000 hundredweight (cwt.), 36 percent less than a year ago, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service. Of this amoung, 825,000 cwt. was stored in processors' facilites, representing 61 percent of the total stocks.

Stocks are defined as the quantity remaining in storage for all purposes and uses, including shrinkage and waste and other losses that occur after the date of each report. Stocks may also include potatoes produced in other states. Sales of fall potatoes for all purposes generally account for about 90 percent of the total fall production. Shrinkage, loss and home use account for the remaining ten percent.

March 1 potato stocks totaled an estimated 108 million cwt. for the 15 states in the stocks program, down 11 percent from a year ago and three percent below the March 1, 1982 stocks. The storage total accounted for 39 percent of fall potato production compared with 41 percent a year ago.

Del. offers U-Pick booklet

NEWARK, Del. — Each year more farmers and gardeners start U-pick operations to market seasonal fruits and vegetables. Though this is generally a fast, economical way to sell fresh produce, success depends very much on skillful management.

The Delaware Cooperative Extension Service publication, "Management of Pick-Your-Own Marketing Operations," covers all aspects of running a U-pick business in the northeastern U.S. The 66-page booklet includes tips on planning, organizing, publicizing and operating this type of venture. It tells how to identify and reach potential customers, schedule production and lay out fields, design facilities such as parking and check-out systems, set prices, deal with customers and employees, and reduce the risk of accidents.

Individual copies are available for $1. To order, write: Mail Room, Townsend Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, DE 19717-1303.

Wednesday, March 28:

GRAINS

Strong corn exports this week are lending further support to the six-week rally we have seen. Of the 43 million bushels shipped this week, Russia and Japan took 11.5 and 9.9 million bushels respectively. Ideas about continued trade activity have pushed May corn up toward 3.60. However, several factors could temper the rally.

New crop wheat supplies look adequate and displacement of corn by wheat which has been so prevalent this year could continue. Also, as export quality #2 and #3 corn get scarce, price rationing and additional premiums may force large foreign buyers out of the market.

World economics, which are still in much more of a recession than we Americans tend to believe, have gotten quite accustomed of late of living hand to mouth. Buyers who can defer purchases until new crop lower prices become available, will probably try to limit their trade activity this summer.

The soybean complex is on the same up trend as corn, but looks tentative in the short run. Uncertainties about Brazilian marketing policy and rumors about poor Brazilian soybean oil quality and meal demand have clouded the fundamental picture.

Brazil has made an apparent attempt to support prices by withholding export registrations. This week they lengthened the period in which the registration will be in the effect but have allowed shipments a loophole. Ships will be allowed to forward load export supplies in anticipation of the government prematurely lifting registration requirements.

We have come to expect this from the Brazilians. They are in dire need of foreign currency to pay their debts; so regardless of what they do in the short run, they can be expected to aggressively export every last bit of oil and meal they produce.

From the supply side, analysts expect Brazilian production around 15 million metric tons — down from early estimates near 16 million metric tons (a decline of about 37 million bushels). Malaysian palm oil supplies have not yet shown their seasonal rebound and all oil supplies still remain tight. This is all bullish, but for the most part already reflected in futures prices.

From the demand side, while oil movement remains steady and domestic crush rate is ahead of the pace needed to meet the USDA forecast (20 million bushels currently vs. 17.2 — USDA), meal demand remains poor.

Basis bids for meal at the Gulf of Mexico are $35 per ton under Chicago futures, which indicates a very weak market. Either basis could improve (demand pickup) or prices in Chicago could decline. The strength in meal prices on the board for the last three weeks has been partly due to sympathy with oil and beans and partly to rumors of heavy Russian purchases.

So far, there is little evidence to support these rumors of meal purchases. Some well placed sources indicate the Russians may do significant whole bean purchases rather than meal in the near future. Thus while the short term trend is sideways to up, most technicians agree that the long term trend remains down in soybean meal. Within a week we should have a better feel for a direction in meal prices.

LIVESTOCK

The livestock markets are still digesting the numbers from last week's bullish Hogs and Pigs Report. Analysts are looking for $60 to $65 cwt in the summer months, as the seasonal decline in numbers continues. Some are calling for hogs equal to or at a premium to cattle by midsummer.

There is evidence that warehouses are aggressively buying hogs now for storage and resale when the summer price increases occur. This has helped to keep the April hog contract on a steady uptrend despite heavy slaughter rates.

The weak financial position of many hog operators could put a damper on aggressive herd expansion. Until producers can lock in hedges at a hog to corn ratio above 17 to 1, herd expansion is unlikely. Historically, however, expansion as not occurred until farmers actually see the cheap feed at harvest time.

Cattle markets continue to mystify market observers by their behavior. Although they seemed to rally in sympathy with the hogs last week, the April and June contracts have shown difficulty taking out contract highs.

Weather problems in the midwest are causing problems of backup, gain and quality for fat cattle. Further precipitation can only worsen the situation in the near term. Premiums for clean cattle can be expected. Retail movement last week seemed to clean up inventories but only the lower prices. Indications are that inventories are again accumulating at the 1.06 cwt level as slaughter supply still exceeds near term demand. Packer margins remain negative and slaughter is expected to be held below 130,000 per day until the bottom lines can be improved.

Near term, retail movement is slow and both hogs and cattle can be pressured. However, with poor feedlock conditions causing many large feeders to move cattle early and the bullish hog fundamentals, a very constructive scenario is developing for the summer livestock markets. One should keep in mind that we are not far away from cookouts and BLT season.

Sheep breeders to meet

FLEMINGTON, N.J. — The condition known as pregnancy toxemia in sheep will be the subject of Monday's meeting of the Hunterdon County Sheep Breeders' Association at the Extension Center, Rt. 31, north of Flemington. The meeting is set to begin at 8 p.m., according to Richard Betts, Stanton, program coordinator.

Pregnancy toxemia, says Betts, is a malady that affects the ewe several weeks before lambing. Unless it is detected in its early stages, it can be fatal to the ewe and the lamb. It is caused by low blood sugar.

The condition, treatment and prevention, will be discussed by members of the group.

The meeting is open to all persons interested in breeding and raising sheep.

BY SALLY BAIR

Making homemade lye soap is a custom which is quickly fading into oblivion. Not too many people wish to take the time to make their own soap when they can walk into any supermarket and find 20 varieties to choose from.

But for Betty Geib, 44 South Main Street, Manheim, making soap is just one more chance for recycling. She makes soap at least once a week, and she does it because she enjoys it.

"I am a recycler." she says, "I really enjoy making something useful out of what someone else throws away. It is a conversation peice. It's not work if you enjoy doing it."

Many readers will remember having watched their mothers make soap, and probably remember it as a dangerous project - children frequently had to leave the room where the soap was being mixed.

"You have to treat lye with respect." Betty says. "It is dangerous to splash it on your skin or to breathe the fumes." Nevertheless, Betty has never had an accident with the solution. Her balcony makes a perfect spot for mixing it.

She makes the process look and sound easy, but part of that certainly comes from her experience. She made her first soap in 1963 when her older sister taught her. Last year she made a total of 112 batches, and already in 1984 she has made 36 batches.

The principle ingredients for homemade soap are lye, fat and water. The fat must be solid shortening, not oil, but can be any kind of vegetable or animal fat.

"A lot of people know I do this and bring me their used fat," Betty explains. She gets donations from the local school cafeteria, and from others who know of her need for it.

The water is also free, since Betty uses only rainwater. She prefers it because it contains no chemicals. When there is no rain she purchases spring water.

The third ingredient, lye, she always purchases. To make one batch, she uses one 12-ounce can of lye. Betty now pays 93 cents per can for the lye, compared with 15 cents when she began making soap. Nevertheless each batch producers about 9 pounds of soap, so it remains inexpensive.

First you melt the fat, after which it must be strained. In her true conservative manner, Betty was using the lining from an old coat she had taken apart as the strining cloth. It takes six pounds of fat per batch.

Although Betty melts the fat in aluminum, she says that containers which come in contact with the lye should be enamel. The utensils she uses to make soap are used exclusively for that.

The can of lye is then mixed with five cups of rainwater. As the lye is added, it causes the water to heat up. The lye solution and the fat must both be cooled somewhat before they are mixed together. Betty says the containers in which they are cooling should be "comfortably warm to the touch" from the outside.

While some people prefer mixing the lye in a crock, Betty feels this is not satisfactory because you cannot guage the warmth of the material through a crock. "You can't feel through a crock," she says.

The lye is carefully poured into the fat, stirring as it is poured. It must be stirred until it begins to solidify. When it looks like pudding, it is ready to be poured into molds.

The amount of time this takes varies with the fat being used. Mutton fat is hard fat, and quickly reaches the desired stage. Beef tallow is also good, hardening fast. Pork and poultry fat are really soft, so when she is using those she mixes them with other fat to speed their hardening process. Also she points out, "I know from experience that you can't use rancid fat."

Betty makes both laundry soap and general purpose soap, and it depends on its final use which kind of mold she will use. What doesn't vary is that every mold is a recycled product.

For laundry soap, she adds borax to the solution and pours it into frozen fruit juice containers. These containers can be easily torn away from the finished soap. She then cuts it into thirds, and grates it in her Mouli grinder.

This laundry soap can be scooped and used in the same manner as powdered commercial products. "I gets diapers nice and white and is great for stains," Betty asserts.

If the soap is general purpose soap, Betty will probably add an oil scent to it, and perhaps color, although only oil base materials can be used to color the soap. She

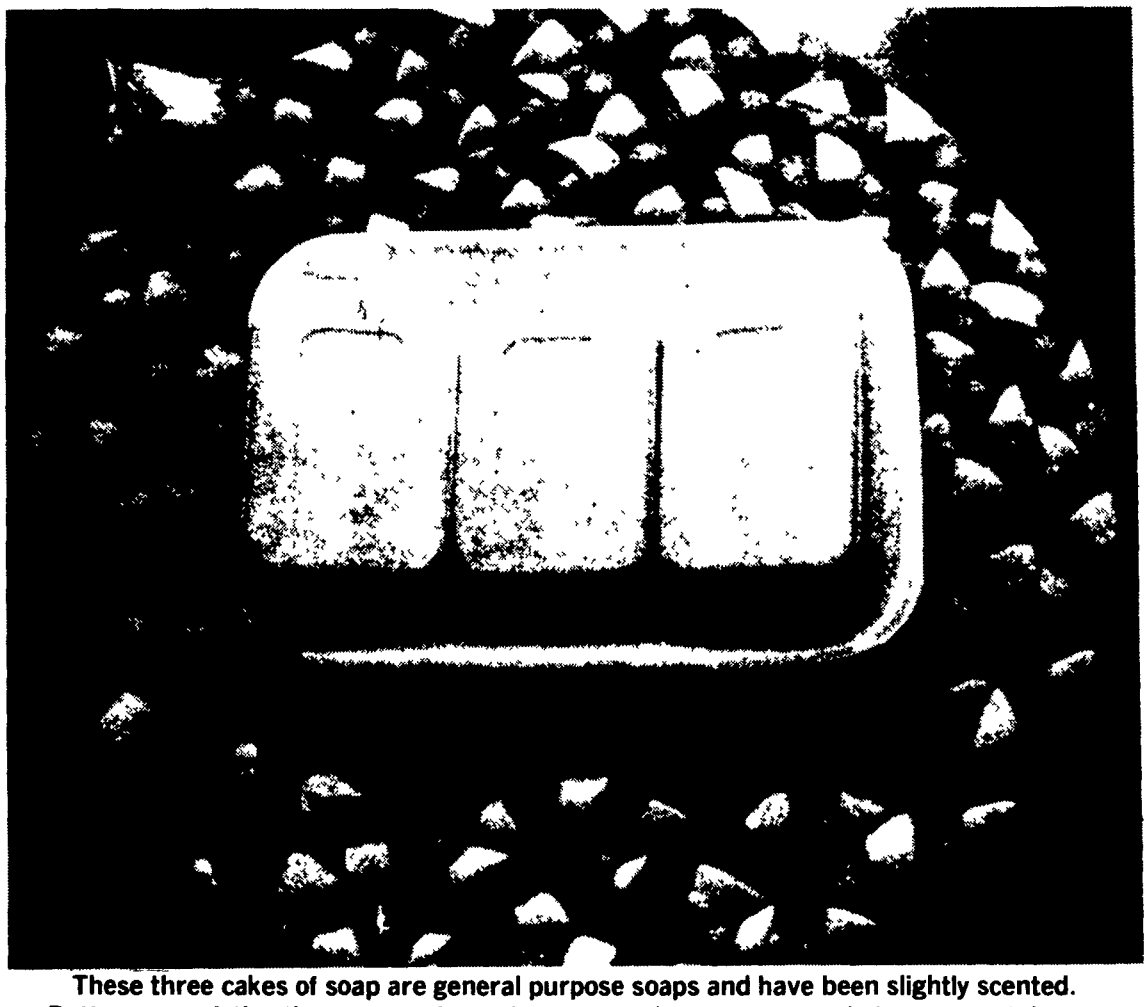
Homestead Notes



These three cakes of soap are general purpose soaps and have been slightly scented. Betty grouped the three as a gift and presents them on a recycled meat container covered with plastic from a local newspaper.

Betty opens one of the many containers of fat which friends and acquaintances give her to help in the soap making process.

Homemade Soap

then puts it into the old soap dishes, old margarine containers, cream cheese containers or anything that is a pliable plastic to allow the hardened soap to be easily removed. Apparently all of her friends assist her in collecting the containers used in this hobby. She uses either one dip or two in each container so the sizes are consistent.

The soap must be aged, Betty explains. "The longer it is aged the better it is, but it should be air dried for at least two weeks." Usually it is ready to come out of the molds in two days and then Betty puts it on large cardboard flats to continue the aging process. "It is really gentle when aged."

An advantage of lye soap is that it lasts a long time. Betty pointed out that if you wet two bars of soap they will stick together and stay, so it is easy to use up partially used cakes of soap.

While Betty sells enough of the soap to offset her costs, she adds, "It's a hobby," A very good record keeper, Betty writes down where all her fat comes from and then makes sure that the donors get some of that batch when she uses it. She attends three flea markets a year to sell her soap there.

While she enjoys telling about soap making, she will not demonstrate it for young people because of the danger with the lye. She says children are "very much interested," and she often talks with youth groups. "I tell them to keep their thoughts and bodies clean and I give them a cake of soap to remind them."

She has taught several people her method of making soap, but she says after they find out how much work it is most do not pursue the hobby.

Betty adds, "People are so nice - I couldn't pursue this hobby without this fat that they give to me."

Rug braiding is another hobby which keeps Betty's hands busy She keeps her braider attached to the kitchen table, and often works on a rug while waiting for the lye and fat to cool. She uses only recycled wool, finding it at garage and rummage sales, and washing it all before beginning a rug. She has pounds and pounds of wool cut into strips and turned under, just waiting to be braided.

Her rug braiding is a relatively new hobby. "I took a course in 1966 with my daughter, but I didn't do anything with it until 1976," Betty recalled. Since then she has made three dozen rugs, some of which have won prizes at both the Manheim and Pennsylvania Farm Shows. A very orderly scrapbook includes a picture of each of the rugs and information on who has it now, and how long it took to make it.

Betty says, "I take it with me anyplace where I have to sit and wait." She presently has orders for 55 braided chair seats and six rugs.

Betty also saves Campbell Soup can labels for Henderson Settlement, Inc. in Kentucky, and envelopes with stamps which she takes with her for stamp collectors when she visits retirement homes.

Secretary of the library board, Betty spends time seeing that the library is staffed, and she is currently serving as president of Farm Women #2. "Being president has been very rewarding," she says.

A member of the Salem United Methodist Church in Manheim, Betty serves on the membership committee of United Methodist women. She makes phone calls or writes notes to people who are new to the area and tells them attending church is a good way to get acquainted. She sends "dozens of cards" on behalf of her committee.

A mother of six, Betty has 14 grandchildren and five great grandchildren, so has plenty of cards to send to her own family.

Betty says she doesn't consider herself organized, but on her table are cards to be mailed in the current month, all addressed and ready to go. She puts the dates where the stamps will go and checks the cards each morning to see which have to be mailed.

Another community activity is working at the Manheim Historical Society, where she often demonstrates the art of rug braiding. Betty also helps at the Manheim Farm Show, helping to sell baked goods after they're judged.

Betty says some of her interest in record-keeping may have come about from her work in an attorney's office, a job which she started when her youngest child was four. After working part-time the last few years she retired completely a year ago, with 19 years of service.

Her retirement is a time of activity, however. Betty says, "You find time for what you enjoy doing. I say that I am often alone but seldom lonely. It is a joy to have something to share and something to give."

Betty is quick to point out that she doesn't have many "organized volunteer activities," but she is making a large commitment to her community in the activities she enjoys doing.

Betty ladels the liquid soap into some of the recycled containers she uses as molds. She uses one or two dips to make all bars of soap about equal in weight.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

The last day of my eight day trip was spent in Puerto Rico. Our breakfast of orange juice, figs, sweet bun, ham omelet and coffee was served on the ship by our Italian waiters — Domenico and Enzo. Going through customs this time was a breeze compared to my European trip.

When we were ashore, they packed twelve of us into a van for a tour of the Rain Forest and Luquillo Beach. Our first stop was at a beautiful waterfalls to take pictures. We saw orchids growing on the tree trunks and were told that there are 90 different kinds.

Despite the fact that my shoe strap tore early in the day, when I twisted my ankle, I climbed a tower built at some 4,000 feet for observation during World War II. The view was worth the effort. The average annual temperature is 77 degrees which means that the climate is uniform and healthful.

As Spain owned the island until they lost the war with the United States in 1898, most of the population is of Spanish descent with some white and Negro mixture. Many are farm laborers and live in poor one-room cabins. However, in the cities we saw many government housing projects.

They grow sugar cane, pineapples, tobacco, coffee and bananas as they receive over 200 inches of rain per year. But, the main industry is textiles — their embroidery work is excellent too.

We drive through old and new San Juan and noticed the decorative iron grillwork on the windows. They are there for protection during the hurricanes that blow across the country each year. There are very few wild animals but a wide variety of birds including parrots, canaries, herons and pelicans.

I spend most of the afternoon in the large airport as I didn't feel it was safe to wander about the city by myself. Here I met and talked with several other couples who were also waiting for flights home. Many people had been on several cruises before this one. This was my first one but I would recommend it to anyone who wants a week in the warm sun during the snowy winter weather of eastern Pennsylvania.

Friendship Force ambassadors selected

Sixty-five people have been notified of their acceptance as Ambassadors for the 1984 Friendship Force Exchange to Derby, England, according to Exchange Director Homer K. Luttringer. The committee will continue to accept applications for an additional 17 places in the exchange to be held August 7 through 21.

Anyone wishing to be considered should contact Kenneth Notturno, deputy exchange director, at 397-0686.

Luttringer also announced the final plans for the second week option of a trip to Scotland. The Scotland trip will include six days and six nights, leaving Derby and traveling to the lake region of Scotland. Visits to Glasgow and Edinburgh as well as a visit to Loch Lomand are included.

Travelers will return to England through York, and will have a day of leisure in London before returning with the group to the United States.

Total cost of this option is $260 for double occupancy or $330 for single occupancy, including hotel lodging and 10 meals.

Each ambassador will live with a host family for the first week, and have the option of staying with a host for the second week, taking the organized trip to Scotland or traveling on their own. A third week of independent travel has been included as an option in this Exchange.

The cost of the Exchange to England has been established at $635, including ground transportation to and from Philadelphia and to and from Derby to London.

Applications for hosts for the England exchange with Lancaster County from May 23 to June 5 will continue to be accepted, with actual host assignments depending upon the total number of ambassadors visiting from England. An orientation meeting for host families will be held in another month, according to Leo Shelly, who is in charge of workshops for both hosts and ambassadors.

Tractor safety course offered

NORRISTOWN — The Montgomery County Extension Service and the 4-H clubs will offer a tractor safety certification course for area youth. Under the Fair Labor Standards Act, all 14 or 15 year olds who plan to be employed off the home farm and who will be involved in operating a tractor of over 20 PTO horse power, must have completed such a course before they can be employed.

The course will begin on April 10th from 7-9 p.m. and continue for three consecutive Tuesday nights up to and including May 1st. A driving test will be held Saturday, May 5th in the morning.

Classes will be held at the Western Montgomery Vo-Tech School in Limerick. Roger Michelone of Green Lane will be the instructor. Some previous driving experience is desirable.

Although the course is geared to 14- and 15-year-olds, anyone interested in learning about basic tractor safety is welcome to attend. Parents are also invited to sit in on the classes.

To reserve space in the class, call Nancy Kadwill at the 4-H office of the Cooperative Extension Service (277-0574). A $3.00 fee will be collected the first night to cover the cost of the manuals.

Reupholstery class scheduled

BRADFORD COUNTY — Bradford County extension will sponsor a reupholstery class in April. The five-day class, to be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. April 9 to 13, will allow students to reupholster a chair in just one week.

This is a "hands on" workshop in which you completely renew a chair under the guidance of a qualified instructor. Mr. Smith, the instructor, knows all the tricks of the trade to solve difficult reupholstery problems. Since he gives much individual assistance, class size is limited.

Enrollees must bring and be able to operate a sewing machine capable of sewing heavy fabric. There are also certain other materials and equipment required at the first class.

Cross-stitch an afghan

Cross-stitching is an ideal way to add color, excitement and uniqueness to an otherwise plain afghan. The cross-stitch is among the simplest of embroidery stitches, yet patterns created by the stitch can be beautiful indeed.

The afghan pictured here is nothing more than solid-color panels enhanced by cross-stitch designs. Panels are first worked in the afghan stitch, then cross-stitched in leaf patterns, joined together and finished with a fringe.

To order Kit A-2272, with yarns and complete instructions, look for ordering information below. To learn more about cross-stitching an afghan, however, just read on.

The cross-stitch technique used for an afghan is an adaptation of "counted cross-stitch," a technique most often used for needlework samplers. In counted cross-stitch, instead of stitching over a printed design, the needleworker copies a design from a separate chart.

By counting boxes on a chart, and then counting threads in the fabric, the needleworker copies the design, stitch by stitch, from chart to fabric. The even weave of today's popular cross-stitch cloths makes the process easy.

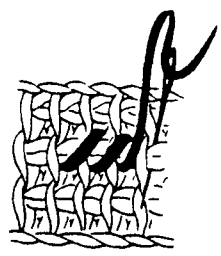
Like even weave cloth, an afghan stitched fabric is an excellent background for cross-stitch. To copy a design from a chart, you simply count one afghan stitch for each box in the design chart.

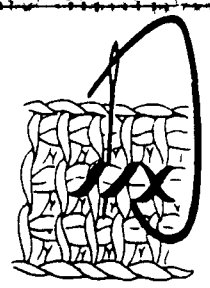
Here are directions for cross-stitching an afghan:

PREPARATION: 1. Crochet a solid-colored fabric sample using the afghan stitch, keeping the stitches as even as possible. 2. Draw a simple design on graph paper. 3. Locate center of graph paper design. 4. Locate center of fabric.

STARTING POINT: 1. Count boxes from center of chart to top of design. 2. Counting one afghan stitch for each square in your fabric, count stitches to find the top of design. 3. Count left to find starting point of design. 4. For each square in charted design, work one cross-stitch over one afghan stitch.

CROSS-STITCHING: 1. Count each intersection between vertical and horizontal yarns as one afghan stitch. 2. Work first half of cross-stitch from left to right, stitching from lower left side to upper right side of afghan stitch (a) 3. Form crosses by working from right to left, stitching from lower right side to upper left side of afghan stitch (b).





HINTS: 1. Work one row at a time from top to bottom. 2. Work cross-stitches through holes between afghan stitches. 3. Use same holes for adjacent cross-stitches, so that stitches touch. 4. Keep length and slant of stitches as even as possible. 5. Take care not to pull threads too lightly. 6. Do not knot ends. Instead, hide them under stitches on wrong side.

Airplanes help fight floods

WASHINGTON — Each spring the deadly cycle repeats itself somewhere. It begins with minute crystals of snow transformed into a single drop of water.

The process accelerates. Vast quantities of snow turn to mush. Tranquil streams swell into raging torrents. Rivers overflow their banks.

On the first line of defense are the National Weather Service's 13 River Forecast Centers scattered across the country. Responsible for issuing annual flood forecasts, they need the most accurate, timely information they can get on the volume of water expected from spring snow melt.

Until recently, the only reliable measurements were taken by ground-based workers who often had to slog through waist-high drifts and blinding blizzards to get accurate measurements. This is especially difficult in places such as the Greant Plains, where snowfields stretch for hundreds of square miles and often contribute to disastrous spring runoffs.

Now, instruments on a low-flying airplane routinely estimate the water content of snow on the ground in most parts of North Dakota, South Dakota, and Minnesota.

The small aircraft, leased by the Weather Service, flies over designated areas well before the first snowflake appears so it can measure Earth's natural gamma radiation. The plane returns when snow cover is heaviest.

Snow cover decreases or weakens the gamma ray emissions, so, by calculating the difference in readings before and after snowfall, scientists can determine the amount on the ground and its water content.

The instruments on the plane can scan a 1000-foot-wide, 10-mile-long path in about five minutes. "It would take all day for a ground-based crew of a dozen men to get meaningful data from a similar area," points out Thomas R. Carroll, manger of the Airborne Gamma Radiation Snow Survey Program in Minneapolis.

"Following carefully designated flight lines, we've been able to estimate the water content of a 30,000 square-mile area in just three days."

The system has been so successful that the plane will fly eastward this year to scan potential trouble spots in Indiana, Michigan, Ohio, New York, Vermont, and Maine. Parts of Canada will also be surveyed with special attention given to regions around Lake Superior, which sometimes help spawn spring floods.

But it's usually rain, not snow, that triggers the most deadly of all water disasters — the flash flood. "Large thunderstorms that stall and dump rain hour after hour over the same area are the most common culprits," says Robert A. Clark, director of the National Weather Service's Office of Hydrology.

Appalachia is particularly prone to flash flooding. "It's because so many communities there grew up between the mountains on flood plains," observes Clark.

Help has arrived. The Weather Service's first automatic flood warning system is functioning in two Pennsylvania counties and the region where Kentucky, West Virginia, and Virginia meet, an area of the Central Appalachians containing some of the most vulnerable valleys in the country.

The Integrated Flood Observing and Warnings System will be expanded this year to cover 80 counties. In a typical IFLOWS setup, rain gauges equipped with tiny radio transmitters are positioned on hillsides near a community. Other automated guages measure the depth and flow of streams and rivers that could be dangerous.

Signals from the gauges are beamed to a computer that immediately analyzes the data, enabling the Weather Service and local civil defense people to issue warnings and mobilize the community against any threats.

IFLOWS got one of its first serious tests last December when heavy rains threatened areas near Williamsport, Pa.

"We were able to get the word out three to six hours before the first flooding began, allowing civil defense workers and flash flood coordinators to take action and spread the word," recalls Albert S. Kachic, the Weather Service's hydrologist for the Eastern Region. "For a change everyone was evacuated before waters were seeping into living rooms."

Budget constraints may hinder further expansion of IFLOWS, but other parts of the country could use it too. Last year floods of all kinds claimed more than 200 lives and caused about $4.5 billion in property damage.

At least half the deaths occurred in automobiles. Explains hydrologist Clark, "Some people misjudge the depth and force of the water, the car suddenly starts to float, and then tips over with them inside."

His advice: "Don't value the car more than your life. When caught in threatening waters, abandon auto."

Johy V. Byrne, administrator of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, is convinced that flash flood programs such as IFLOWS will help forestall such tragedies.

"Our goal is to provide reliable advance warnings of flash floods from 30 minutes to three hours in advance," he says. "This, combined with effective local action, could dramatically cut the loss of life and property."

Celebrate National Bake Week

Celebrate National Bake Week, April 1 though 7, by trying out some new recipes for cakes, cookies, muffins, bread and other goodies that tempt the taste buds year round.

If, like me, you have an insatiable sweet tooth, this week should have special appeal for you.

Listed below are several recipes that should keep you busy baking throughout the week.

ROUND CRACKED WHEAT BREAD

1½ c. cracked wheat
1½ c. water
1½ c. whole wheat flour
1 envelope active dry yeast
2 T. sugar
2 t. salt
½ c. milk
2 T. butter or margarine
2 to 2½ c. all-purpose flour oil

Mix well-cracked wheat and water; cover and let stand overnight. In large bowl of mixer mix whole wheat flour, yeast, sugar and salt; set aside. Heat milk and butter until very warm (120 ° to 130° - butter does not need to melt). Gradually add to flour mixture, then add soaked cracked wheat. Beat at medium speed 3 min., scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in enough all-purpose flour to make moderately still dough. Turn out on lightly floured surface; knead until smooth and elastic - 10 to 12 min. adding flour to prevent sticking. Place in greased bowl; turn to grease top. Cover and let rise in warm draft-free place until doubled, 1½ to 2 hrs. Punch down; divide in half. Let rest 10 min. Shape each half in 7-inch round loaf. Place on greased cookie sheets. Brush with oil. Cover; let rise until doubled, about 45 min. Bake in preheated 300° to 350° oven for 20 to 30 min. Cool on racks.

Ladies Have You Heard?

By Doris Thomas

Lancaster Extension Home Economist

Improvements May Be The Wave Of The Future

Spring thaws bring thoughts of new and new-old houses to many would-be homeowners. Realtors, contractors and home improvement specialists are stepping up their visibility to capitalize on the seasonal interest. This year, the home improvement field may be more active than new home buying.

If the trend to improve includes you, evaluate your neighborhood, your home, and your skills before you join the ranks of the improvers.

Investing $10,000 in an older home with a current market value of $40,000 makes little sense if most of the homes in your neighborhood are valued at a lower figure. However, if the neighborhood shows signs of change and some residents are making home improvements, investing in an older home could be a wise use of housing dollars.

Ask a reputable contractor to evaluate your home for remodeling possibilities and costs before you begin. Check wiring, plumbing, heating, and opportunities to make the house more energy efficient. These may not be the glamorous changes you have in mind, but there is no point in having the latest kitchen or the perfect family room if the working parts of your house do not function as they should.

Once you are ready for the changes you can see, concentrate first on those that add value to your home such as a modern kitchen or a second bath.

You might even take a hint from the great room of the New American Home and convert several small rooms into one large, airy, multi-purpose room for entertaining and comfortable living.

And then there's the question of skills. If you have home-building abilities or the time and interest to learn them, by all means follow the wave of the future and do it yourself. However, if your schedule is busy, if you have health problems, or if you are not "handy" you'll need help.

Home contracting has turned into big business. Not all firms are large, but more and more of them are entering the field all the time. Ask your friends and neighbors for names of reputable builders and contractors. Ask for references and take the time to see samples of their work before you sign on the dotted line.

Always put agreements and costs in writing. It is important for both you and the contractor to sign the agreement before any work begins.

Drying In Your Microwave

Using your microwave to dry fruits and vegetables can save time and energy, but you might lose some vitamins and minerals in the process.

Although no research has been completed on the subject, drying in your microwave can reduce the chances of the outside of the food mass becoming tough, thus impeding moisture removal a condition that commonly occurs when food is dried in a conventional oven.

This condition, called case hardening, occurs when the outside of the food mass dries before the inside. The same thing can happen to frozen food and is called freezer burn.

But because microwave ovens dry the inside of the food at the same time as the outside, unlike conventional ovens that heat food from the outside in, moisture moves throughout the food mass and keeps the outside from drying too quickly.

Any drying process, however, strips fruits and vegetables of some of their vitamins, including A, C, riboflavin and thiamin. This is one reason drying is among the least popular forms of preservation.

The higher the temperature of the oven, the more nutrients you can lose.

So, in a microwave oven, where you dry foods at a higher temperature than a conventional oven, you might be losing even more vitamins.

The ideal method of drying fruits and vegetables is at a low temperature around 140 degrees F for eight to 24 hours.

For more information on drying fruits and vegetables, contact your County Extension Office. The Cooperative Extension Service is an affirmative action, equal opportunity educational institution.

A panel of three professional judges will rate the final recipes on the following basis: 40 points for taste; 20 points for appearance of the dish and recipe presentation; 20 points for originality; and 20 points for ease of preparation and practicality of recipe.

The Cook-Off contest will be held in conjunction with the grand opening of Appalachian Lamb Co., the east coast's newest lamb slaughtering facility which specializes in fresh carcass lamb, boxed lamb and Kosher trade.

The Pennsylvania Lamb Cook-Off contest is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Meat Marketing Program, Appalachian Lamb Company, and the Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association.

Tailoring unit added to 4-H program

Some people aren't built to wear padded shoulders. Others need a hem to touch the kneecap rather than to ride below. To cuff or tuck, to pleat or dart? These are the questions the new tailoring unit of the 4-H clothing project addresses.

"Tailoring is the molding and shaping of fabric to fit the body," says Wendy Hamilton, state program associate for 4-H foods and clothing projects. "Depending on material and pattern choice, tailoring is approached from different directions. But the major emphasis is always the same, making sure the garment suits its wearer. Not every fad fits every person."

The goal of the tailoring unit is to teach participants to analyze their specific clothing needs.

"We're trying to teach consumer skills as well as basic construction," says Ms. Hamilton. "The garment may suit a person's build while being totally wrong for the lifestyle. If the fabric requires dry cleaning, can the person foot the bill? Can stains be removed or is the outfit limited to very few wearings?"

This level nine project is new to 4-H, and its addition is accompanied by a level 10 independent study. Both units were added to meet the needs of older youth.

"The teens look for guidance, but often do not need direct supervision," says Ms. Hamilton. "We're trying to encourage them to be creative and to think for themselves." For more information on 4-H Programs, call 277-0574.

Sandwiched generation caught between parents and kids

BY SUZANNE KEENE

LANCASTER — Grandma has always centered her life around Grandpa - his life, his work and his friends - but now Grandpa is gone and Grandma feels as though she has lost her purpose in life. She transfers the center of her life to her daughter and family, depending on them to meet her needs.

But meeting those needs can sometimes be a difficult and trying task. Jane Eddy, family life educator with Family and Children's service of Lancaster, says adult children often need help in understanding and coping with their aging parents. Only five percent of the population over 65 are in nursing homes, Eddy said, noting that the statistic is an indication of just how much effort grown children are putting into meeting their aging parents' needs.

To help them meet the challenge of providing for aging parents, Family and Children's Service in conjunction with the Office of Aging is offering a seminar on four Tuesday evenings in April on Life in the Sandwiched Generation.

When referring to the sandwiched generation, Eddy means those adults who are caring for elderly parents as well as their own teenaged children.

"They find themselves in the middle, with aging parents and children dependent on them," Eddy explained.

The course, she said, will familiarize participants with facts on aging, provide information about community services and help adult children look at their relationship with their parents and improve that relationship for greater happiness.

"Their greatest concern is their relationship with their aging parent," Eddy said of those who have already signed up for the course. Often the adults in the sandwiched generation have pent up feelings of guilt and anger over their inability to satisfy both their own needs and their parents' needs.

"They want to meet their parents' needs, but need some time for themselves," she explained.

Many elderly people have lost loved ones, jobs, a portion of their mobility or physical health, and their homes. Some people react with with anger or get stubborn and deny their losses, making it difficult to get along with them, Eddy explained. It is important, Eddy said, for adults to recognize that their parents are grieving and that they need time to do so.

"If you look at it for what it is, it sometimes helps you to cope with it," she said.

Eddy said the the group taking the course will talk about ways of helping aging parents develop new support networks like church activites, card groups or senior citizen centers. The course will also offer suggestions on how to plan for an aging parent's future, including concerns about placement in a nursing home, and should help participants develop skills they can use in dealing with their aging parents

One session will be devoted to talking about the individuals' relationships with their family since childhood and what they can do to change it. It is important, Eddy said, for adult children to understand that the burden of change rests on them since their parents are probably quite set in their ways.

During the last session, Dr. David Fuchs, a family practitioner, will talk about the physiological changes that accompany aging, including discussion on Alzheimer's disease and senility.

Family and Children's Service has developed a list of guidelines for relating to aging parents that was developed in earlier courses like this one. The list includes.

-Accept your aging parent--who, what, where--as he is

-Seek out what is good and especially what is likeable in your parents' habits and qualities. As far as possible, respond to and work with that

-Remember that your parent yearns for affection and will be responsive to small evidences of genuine concern and warmth. Encourage her to maintain friendships outside the family.

-Recognize the external problems your parent faces: financial, social, residential, personal, etc.

-Always attempt to be honest with your aging parent. Don't overprotect, overprotection demeans the person.

Anyone interested in attending the course should contact Jane Eddy at 397-5241. The classes will be held each Tuesday evening in April from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. A $30 fee is requested, but if a person cannot pay the entire fee, other arrangements are possible. Family and Children's Service is a non-profit, United Way agency. Co-leaders of the course are Jane Eddy and Ann Verdin, information and referral coordinator of the Office of Aging

Jane Eddy, family life educator with Family and Children's Service of Lancaster, will be one of the leaders of a seminar aimed at helping adult children cope with their aging parents.

"Where's the Beef?"

This phrase represents one of the most successful television advertising campaigns of recent years. It's been used by candidates hot on the campaign trail, sermon titles and now I'm giving in to the impulse.

This little jingle has worked its way right into our vocabulary and has been used at any timely moment to generate a lighter side to the conversation. The "heavier" side of the story is that television advertising is big business and affects each one of us.

Television has had an impact on family life. The statistics indicate that the average adult woman spends 30 hours and 14 minutes per week in front of the T.V. On one hand, television has increased our vision to see and learn things we would not normally have a chance to see — space shuttle journeys, African Plains and the Muppets. It may stretch our imagination and provide relaxation. My fondest T.V. memory is having my Dad come in from a long day of farm work and watch Red Skeleton. This was about the only thing he ever watched and as kids we didn't get all the jokes but it was great fun watching Dad laugh.

On the other hand, the television is teaching values. And these values are not always ones we would agree with. T.V. also promotes passivity — all you have to do is sit and watch.

What has happened to families as a result? In a recent study, one third of the teens interviewed said that watching T.V. was the only time the family spent time together. Link this to the fact that two-thirds reported that they do not talk while watching T.V. Did you ever try talking while the television is on? After a few glares by others we all learn the golden rule of not speaking until a commercial.

And what about advertisements? While some of us head to the refrigerator, kids are staying tuned into the ads. The average child watches over five hours of advertisements each week, or over 20,000 commercials per year. Now there is even an ad to encourage families to watch T.V. together!

I think we need to take a common five sense approach to television. First, we need to use the sense of sight. If you have children, watch the programs they watch and see what they are seeing. Take a T.V. inventory of how much the television is on and what is watched.

Secondly, listen to what your family is saying about the programs. As a child I remember leaving the room when "Lassie" was in a dangerous spot — which was always somewhere in the middle of the program. I had difficulty realizing that it was only a show... and sometimes I still do!

Then use your mouth to talk about values being taught by television. Some good questions to encourage discussion might be, "What could have been tried before violence?" and "Do you know what advertisements really are?" One youngster answered the latter question by saying that commercials were to give the actors time to change costumes.

Finally, use the sense of creativity. Devleop alternative activities to do together as a family. Try scavenger hunts, field trips to the attic, bicycling, board games, baking, music or a new hobby.

Remember, we can always get a re-run of a television program, but there is no re-run of our family life.

Food Needs Change as People Age

MEDIA — Elderly people have an interesting dilemma: they need fewer calories because they are less active than they once were, but they still need the same amount of nutrients. To make sure they get all the nutrients they need and yet cut calories, elderly people should make careful food choices, says Greta C. Vairo, Extension Home Economist.

To ensure that your body is getting all of its nutritional requirements, eat a variety of foods. Many of the foods that supply nutrients to the diet are the same ones that most people enjoy all of their lives. A healthy diet should include whole grain breads and cerals, dark green and yellow vegetables, citrus fruits, dairy products, fish, poultry, meats, eggs, dried beans and peas, nuts and seeds and vegetable oils.

Empty calories, like those found in sweets, fats, refined, unenriched grains and alcohol, should be essentially eliminated from the diet because they add calories but not nutrients. Instead of these foods, choose others that will boost nutritional quality.

To make sure you are buying the best food products, read the labels. Nutrition labeling is required on all foods that are fortified or enriched or that claim to be nutritional. The label will also include the serving size, caloric value, protein, carbohydrate and fat content and percentages of the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowances for major vitamins and minerals in each serving.

(Turn to Page B17)

Food needs change

Nutrition labeling makes it possible to compare food products in terms of food values. Take advantage of this system. Another situation many face as they get older is suddenly finding themselves eating alone when all their lives they shared meals with family. Many elderly people dislike the idea of eating by themselves so they skip meals, eat the same foods repeatedly or eat less than they need.

Try these suggestions to make a meal more pleasant, even if it is eaten by yourself. Set an attractive table and eat by a window. Watch TV or listen to the radio. Read a book or magazine or eat outdoors when the weather is nice. Try to treat yourself to a meal in a restaurant every now and then.

Or try inviting company for dinner. If you're on a fixed budget, have a pot luck dinner where everyone brings a dish.

Many communities have programs for the elderly where you can get a nutritious, hot meal at a low cost, sometimes even free.

Wool producers plan ewe chain contest

YORK — York County's Sheep and Wool Producers are making plans for their fourth ewe chain contest, in which a deserving youngster can win a lamb. A total of six lambs have been awarded during the three years that the chain contest has been held.

The contest is open to all 4-H members, or youngsters 8 through 18 who would join the 4-H lamb club and are equipped with facilities for caring for their prize.

As part of their entry in the ewe chain competition, youngsters must submit an essay, the length of their choice, explaining why they are interested in winning a lamb and would be deserving of the opportunity.

Winners will be announced and the lamb presented to the lucky youngster during the Sheep and Wool Producers annual field day, set for April 21 at the York Fairgrounds.

Applications for the ewe chain award are available from chair- ... eg Lau, Box 117, Logan-ville, 17342, or from county agent Tony Dobrosky, Agriculture Extension Office, 112 Pleasant Acres Road, York, 17402, phone 757-9657.

To be eligible for judging, applications must be returned to Lau or the extension office by April 14.

Royster FERTILIZER

Banded or In-Furrow.

COUNTER® Works Best For Conservation Tillage.

For nine years, university tests have shown COUNTER® systemic insecticide-nematicide to be the most effective corn insecticide there is—whether you apply it banded or remove your banders and apply it directly in the seed furrow. Now, with more and more growers going to some form of reduced or minimum tillage, field tests are also proving COUNTER to be the best insecticide for conservation tillage.

For trashy fields, apply in the seed furrow. COUNTER can be applied safely and directly in the seed furrow where it won't get lost in the trash or be blown away. At the same time, COUNTER in-furrow or in a band controls more corn pests than any other insecticide. Plus, COUNTER acts systemically, as well as on contact, so it works through the plant for total root and early-season foliar protection.

Safe for seed. Since 1975, tests by universities in all the major corn states confirm that COUNTER won't hurt your seed.

Broadest spectrum control. COUNTER controls more corn pests at one low rate than any other insecticide. Check the charts and compare.

For all the facts about the best corn insecticide available, come see us today about COUNTER.

Use leftover seeds this year

DELAWARE COUNTY — Before you stock up on flower and vegetable seeds, have you checked last year's leftovers? According to C.R. Bryan, Jr. Delaware County Cooperative Extension Service director, many seeds germinate well the second year, especially if they have been properly stored.

The seed test is simple. From each packet you're testing, wrap several seeds in a moist paper towel and place them in a plastic bag — a separate bag for each variety. If most seeds in the bag germinate withing two to three weeks, then last year's seeds are still good and ready to be used. Throw away the test seeds and plant those varieties that germinated well. Discard those that did not.

If you are buying new seed, plan now to use the leftovers next year. As soon as you've finished planting the seeds you need, store the leftovers in a closed contaioner in a dry, cool or even cold location. A basement, unheated storm room, or even the refrigerator are good locations to try.

Not all gardens are large enough to accommodate all the seeds in all the packets you are using, so get in the habit of saving the leftovers for next year instead of casting them to the four winds.

DVC Block & Bridle Club presents awards

BY MARTHA GEHRINGER

DOYLESTOWN — The Delaware Valley College's Block and Bridle Club recently held its annual awards banquet at Bentley's in nearby Warminister.

The awards portion of the evening opened with the Outstanding senior award. This year it was presented to two seniors, Steve Trostle and Bret Defrance. Both have been active in the club for the past four years and have participated in all of the club's activities.

The next award was the outstanding Block and Bridle Member. This award went to Irene Brown, a junior animal husbandry major who has been described as "a terrific asset to the club".

A scholarship of $250.00 was awarded to Steve Majrek. This scholarship award is based on scholastic ability, club activities, outside activities, and future plans in the animal husbandry field.

The collegiate livestock judging team was also honored for its activities this past year. Their best contest was the Eastern States Exposition where they were the third highest team overall and Kenneth Novak was the high individual. Members of the 1983 judging team included Teresa Verdefame. Mark Miller, Beth Claypoole, Kenneth Novak, Todd Hesse and Steve Trostle. The team was coached by Rodney Gilbert, livestock superintendent at the college and advisor to the Block and Bridle Club.

The students then made a couple of presentations of their own. The 1983 judging team gave Gilbert a mascot and a challenge for the 1984 judging team to do even better than they had done. They also gave Mrs. Frederick Hofsaess a gift certificate in appreciation for her help and understanding while her husband, Dr. Hofsaess, advisor and chairman of the animal husbandry department, was busy with the club activities.

This year also marked the first time the equestrian team held their awards in conjunction with the Block and Bridle banquet. These awards were presented by co-captains Michele Smith and Megan Allen. The senior award went to Kathleen Gill and John Melora. The other awards were: Most sportsmanship, Cindy Sharpe; Most improved rider, Pam Hojonowski; Most team spirit, Beth Meny; and the captain's award which went to Lisa Martini.

The guest speaker for the evening was Anthony G. Dobrosky, York County Extension Director and this year's recipient of the Penn State Department of Animal Science Alumni Award. The title of his speech was "The Icing to Your Cake" and he shocked some members of the audience with his opening statement that he "doesn't give a darn about grades in college". He then went on to explain that although grades may be important if one is going in a certain direction after college, for most, however, the grades will be irrelevant. The best thing a student can do to prepare for the "real world" is become very involved in extra-curricular activities.

Dobrosky feels the extra-curricular activities teach attitude, skill, and enthusiasm which cannot be learned in the classroom and are the tools needed to get ahead in life. He encouraged active participation in such activities during college because although the classes are important and the basis of a good education, it is the extra-curricular activities which provide "the icing to the cake".

Those attending the banquet also witnessed a changing of the guard for the club as the 1983 officers turned over their offense to the 1984 slate.

Rataouille is a colorful, delicious, easy-to-make fresh vegetable dish that comes to us from the Provence section of Frange. What is so appealing about ratatouille in addition to the already mentioned attributes is that you have to go no further than the summer vegetable garden to find the ingredients. Rataouille is a marvelous mix of peppers, eggplant, zucchini and cucumbers topped off with a tomato sauce. Here's how to grow rataouille:

Sweet peppers, generally harvested when they are green (although they can be allowed to become red), are an ornamental addition to the vegetable garden with their glossy green leaves and compact, bushy habit of growth. Besides their use of ratatouille, they can be stuffed, stewed or used raw in salads and with dips. After purchasing plants from your garden center or greenhouse, do not set them into the ground until all danger of frost has passed and the night temperatures will not fall below 55°F; doing so will cause plants to stop growing and suffer great damage. Set plants about 24-inches apart in a rich soil kept moist, especially at flowering time when lack of moisture can result in no fruit set. If it becomes extremely hot during the summer, mulch peppers to keep the soil cool as they will not set fruit if temperatures climb over 85°F.

Hot peppers, a close relative, can be used to spice up your ratatouille but are becoming most popular with the increasing rise in the love of Mexican food. You need only a plant or two of hot peppers for an average family; to tone down their spiciness, use them fresh and/or remove the seeds. Ornamental peppers are petite, compact pepper plants that produce hot fruit while adding a decorative touch to the garden.

Eggplants, like peppers, are set out after it has become warm as they are very tender. Set 24- to 30-inches apart in a deep, well fertilized soil and harvest the attractive black or purple fruit any time from one-third to fully mature.

Cucumbers, like the other warm season vegetables, should not be planted until the danger of frost is past. However, if earlier planting is desired, it can be done if a protective covering or cloche is applied at night if temperatures are going to dip. Cucumbers require a steady supply of fertilizer applied to a well drained soil. Although cucumbers can be left to trail along the ground, they will require less garden space and will be less subject to damage if they are trained to grow up some sort of a trellis or fence. Tie the vines carefully to prevent damage and take the same precaution when harvesting fruit.

Zucchini is one type of summer squash, which is a vegetable whose fruits are eaten when immature in contrast to the winter squash which are harvested in fall and have a thick skin. Zucchini grow on bush type rather than on vines, and grow to about 3-feet around. Like the other ingredients of ratatouille, they like warm soil and days to produce at their best. Provide zucchini with loose, well drained soil rich in organic matter and kept cool with an organic or black plastic mulch. If early flowers do not set fruit, do not be disturbed; all squashes bear separate male and female flowers, and only the female flowers produce fruit. Zucchini, like most other vegetables, require full sun.

Making ratatouille is easy. Cut the various vegetables into bite-sized pieces and saute in a small amount of butter or oil. Season to taste with onions, garlic, oregano or other spices and top with a tomato sauce.

Ladies have their day out

BY ROBIN PHILLIPS

Reading/Berks County Farmers Association ladies treated themselves to lunch and a full educational program at their annual "Ladies Day Out" meeting on Wednesday, March 21, at the Holiday Inn, Reading. Enlightening talks were given by Michael Feeney, Berks County Coroner, Carolyn Holleran, Ag in the Classroom representative, Tammy Schlappich, youth conference representative, and Lillian Harnish, chairman of the women's committee.

The women's committee formed their own country band to entertain the women.

Because of a need to learn about local government, the county coroner, Michael Feeney, was hosted to present the programs of his office. Feeney cited many cases as examples of the many ways investigations and existing rules can be improved. He stated that his office is there for the purpose of "checks and balances" on investigations of deaths. "We don't treat any case lightly," he told the women.

A big advocate of seat belts, Feeney said that, "seat belts save lives, there's no question about it." He told everyone that the odds are 140 to one that a death will occur if seat belts are not used. "That's better odds than the lottery," he said.

He also advocated smoke detectors, especially in the older farm homes. "After the fact, it's too late," he said. "If you don't have a smoke detector, buy one. If you don't have a game plan to escape your house in case of fire, make one," Feeney advised.

Feeney discussed some of the problems of his job and spoke of the changes being made. Admitting that he has come under much criticism from police forces and ambulance crews because of his views, Feeney said, "minutes save lives." Ambulances have often been detained at the scene of an accident unnecessarily by police or crews taking vital signs that they could take enroute. He also cited problems in improper responses, territorialization by ambulances, travel time involved in transporting victims to hospitals other than the closest one.

Michael Feeney, Berks County coroner, spoke to the Berks women about his views for improvements in ambulance services and investigations of deaths.

Carolyn Holleran, Berks County Intermediate Unit, spoke on the "Ag in the Classroom" programs. "Agribusiness is our biggest industry," she stated. The program is geared to teach the teachers to present agricultural concepts and how they relate to the economic system in the classrooms. Holleran and Karen Freeman, extension service, have been working on this program for the past year with the county teachers and are pleased with the response. More farms for

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

When they became a rural institution, I'm not sure anyone knows. But farm sales are as familiar a part of this season as the greening up of pastures.

Farm sales, while serving the purpose of disposing of material goods, run the whole gamut of human emotion in what they actually represent. Some are a joy to all involved, perhaps a family of livestock breeders offering their best while cutting back on the work for awhile. Many, though, are brushed with the tragedy of death, divorce, financial disaster or legal dispute.

Still, while a proven successful merchandising maneuver, farm sales unfailingly have an air of social event about them. Strangers strike up conversation as they lean against a barn wall and eye the auctioneer. Neighbors josh at each other. Friends who haven't seen one another for a long time renew acquaintances.

More often than not, a certain percentage of the crowd is paying no attention to what's happening on the auction block or the auctioneer's coaxing calls. Propped against a fence, they'll gather in two's, three's or four's, sharing crop notes, production averages, or equipment woes.

"How's that new combine working for you?"

"I hear you're renting the place next to you this year?"

"What'd pigs (cows, sheep, eggs, etc.) bring last week?"

Farm sales are a great human equalizer, since no one cares how you dress for this social event. Garb is dictated by the weather, not high fashion. In a typical farm crowd you'll find anything from quality, checkered wool hunting coats to ragged, manure-spattered heavy sweatshirts, to a rainbow of insulated coveralls in muted shades of blue, green and grey. Needless to say, blue jeans are standard, too, as are sturdy boots to do battle with the inevitable mud that blesses seasonal sales.

Hats. Always there are hats. Feed company hats, milk cooperative hats, feed hats, and even sometimes the more dressy wool or felt hats, if weather demands.

If bidding is the prime reason to attend a farm sale, I've long suspected that eating plays a close second.

While urban social events may revolve around silver trays of dainty hors d'oeurves, farm sales are fueled by soup and pie Generally it's prepared by some of the best cooks in the area, lovingly donating their time and talent to the benefit of ag, church fire company or other community group in charge of the food concession.

Vegetable, bean, chicken corn will probably be on the soup list – we won't suggest a favorite since we'd probably start an argument.

Hot dogs never taste better than when simmered for a couple of hours with six dozen others on the back of a hot plate set up in the corner of someone's farm machine shed. Same goes for another favorite, hamburg barbecue, heaped up on a bun so thickly the abundance tumbles off the side into the paper plate and has to be nibbled from the fingers.

Hot and cold drinks abound, the most popular dependent on the temperature and wind whipping around the barn corners. Hot chocolate and coffee win hands down in cold weather, surpassed by chocolate milk and soft drinks as temperatures grow more balmy.

And back to that pie. Blueberry, immediately says the farmer. No way, I'll argue, seeking out the biggest piece of coconut cream, topped this high with lightly-browned meringue.

Machinery models come and go. Crop techniques evolve and change. Computers may soon make even yesterday's farm techniques ancient history.

But the institution of the rural farm sale will likely be with us for a long time.

The March meeting of the Davidsburg 4-H was held at the 4-H center.

Nicoweelm, an exchange student from West Germany, provided the program. He showed slides and talked about some cities.

An egg hunt will be held at the Salem church parking lot or recreation area.

tours are needed and contributions for the effort are welcomed.

On the lighter side, the women's committee formed their own unique band to entertain after lunch. With homemade instruments, band members lead the singing of many old favorite melodies.

An astrologist, Lenora Hill, Birdsboro, rounded out the day and assisted ladies in seeing their "inner selves". An astrologer for eight years, Hill said, "I use astrology as a counselling tool." Saying that she was honest when dealing with people who ask her to "read their signs", Hill viewed several personalities of "volunteers" and ended the day with light-hearted entertainment.

Laurie Dobrosky wins speaking contest

Laurie Dobrosky, daughter of Patricia and Anothy Dobrosky of Glen Rock, won first place in the Penn State Coaly Society Guldin Public Speaking Contest on Sunday, March 18.

The Coaly Society is a Penn State College of Agriculture honorary society for faculty and students. It awards $225 to the speaking contest winner along with an invitation to present the talk to the entire faculty. Second through sixth place winners also receive cash awards.

Gregory Silver, Radio-TV producer/director for the College of Agriculture; Kathryn DeBoer, retired professor of speech communications; and Grant Sherritt, associate professor of animal science, were this year's judges.

The contest is open to all students in the college and the topic may be any subject relating to agriculture. Sixteen students competed for the award this year

Laurie's talk, "Competition Between Man and Animals: A Real or Imagined Controversy," focused on the agricultural and human benefits of animal products. According to her presentation, animals use forages and low-grade grains not used for human consumption. They also convert feed protein into usable animal protein and provide vitamins, minerals and amino acids for human diets.

Laurie is vice-president of both the Block and Bridle Club and the Coaly Society and is catalog editor for the Little International. She was recently named outstanding senior in Block and Bridle, and last year was assistant editor of the "Ag Activator", the student newspaper in the College of Agriculture.

This spring, Laurie is showing a Guernsey in the Dairy Exposition on April 28 and a Dorset ewe in the Little International on April 21. Last year Laurie won reserve champion sheep fitter in the Little International.

Last summer Laurie was an intern for the Office of Planning and Research for the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. She is a senior in animal production with an interest in writing and public relations and will graduate from Penn State in May.

Chester County begins search for dairy princess

All single young women who are between the ages of 16 and 22 and from a dairy farm background, are eligible to compete for the title of 1984 Chester County Dairy Princess. The contest will be held on June 2 in conjunction with the Cochranville Strawberry Festival. The pageant will be held that evening in the Community Center.

Contestants must be the daughter of a dairy farmer in Chester County or own at least one dairy animal herself. She must have completed her junior year in high school and will not turn 22 before December 31. The Dairy Princess will be selected from a panel of three judges who will make their decision based on appearance, speaking ability, poise, personality, and intelligence.

Twenty-seven state princesses and hundreds of county princesses have served as spokespersons for the dairy industry in Pennsylvania. They appear in shopping malls, fairs, supermarkets, and on radio and television to educate consumers about the dairy farmer's product.

The winner of the Chester County contest will compete in the State Dairy Princess Pageant held in Harrisburg in September. The state pageant is coordinated through the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Area and Promotion Agency.

Young women interested in entering the Chester County Dairy Princess pageant should contact Charlene Rohrer-Ranck 717-442-9008, Cathy Guest 215-469-6627, or George Lamborn 215-932-3305 before April 30.

This year's pageant will be held on May 26 at 8:00 p.m. in the 4-H Center.

Pastures need management

NEWARK, Del. — A pasture can be a valuable source of nutrients as well as an essential excerise area for horses. When poorly maintained, pastures become unproductive, parasite infested and a very expensive use of land. However, anyone who owns or plans to buy a horse or pony should provide it with a high quality pasture, advises University of Delaware equine specialist C.M. Reitnour.

Custom seeding, liming and fertilizing make small pasture areas possible today for horse owners who have little or no equipment. Horse pastures differ sharply from those used to produce hay – an enterprise usually so expensive in small fields as to be nearly prohibitive, the specialist says. Several specialized pieces of equipment are needed and unless the cost can be spread over several tons of hay, it's often cheaper to buy the hay.

The tendency of horses to walk fence lines, congregate fecal droppings and selectively graze adds to the difficulties of pasture management. Each practice places a stress on pasture grasses. Horses relish closely cropped grass and will avoid old or tall grass unless forced to eat it because of a limited food supply. If an excessive amount of clipping is necessary to keep the pasture vegetative and palatable, it's probably undergrazed, Reitnour says. A high quality pasture should accommodate one 1,000-pound horse or two 500-pound ponies per acre. Over-grazing is equally damaging and both can ruin a good pasture.

It is possible to improve an old pasture simply by changing management practices. Most run-down pastures are infested with weeds which compete with desirable grasses for water and nutrients. Weeds can be controlled by using recommended herbicides and/or good pasture management through fertilization and clipping.

A quality horse pasture will have a balance of grass and legumes such as clover or alfalfa. These plants fix atmospheric nitrogen and supply it to grasses in the mixture more uniformly and cheaply than any other source, Reitnour says. Grazing and fertilization practices should be aimed at maintaining a good balance of legume in the mix. Lime, high potassium and close clipping will encourage clover, whereas high nitrogen, light grazing or mowing above 3 to 4 inches will favor grass and suppress clover.

Follow soil test recommendations in applying lime and fertilizer. Pasture soils should have a pH of about 6.5 with mineral levels (phosphorus and potassium) kept in the high range.

For each acre of established pasture, the specialist offers the following recommendations:

* Destroy weeds.
* Apply ground limestone to maintain a pH of about 6.5.
* Apply 75 pounds of P_2O_5 and 150 pounds of K_20 (500 pounds of 0-15-30 or the equivalent).

Some pastures are too run-down to save simply by adding fertilizer, Reitnour concludes. If the right grasses and legumes aren't present, he recommends a complete reseeding.

Lime is important for vegetable crops

UNIVERSITY PARK — Be cautious in applying fertilizer to vegetable croplands and home gardens already rich in plant nutrients. You could waste time and money, as shown in several years of experiments by plant nutrition scientists at Penn State.

In vegetable experiments, one-third of the crops showed no response to added fertilizer. This indicated good reserve supplies of nutrients already in the soil, says Cryril B. Smith, plant nutritionist with the Agricultural Experiment Station at Penn State.

Smith claims most gardens and vegetable fields have "soil banks" rich in plant foods. What is often needed, he said, are small quantities of certain nuitrients to balance out the crop needs, instead of a whole range of plant foods in large amounts.

"The greatest efficiency takes place," he affirms, "when just enough fertilizer is applied to satisfy current needs."

He strongly advises all gardeners to use lime in growing vegetables. He said nutrient studies of sweet corn show that lime makes available at least 40 percent of the plant foods needed beyone those already in the soil. With a good liming program, the vegetable grower is almost half way toward the goal of supplying needed plant food.

Smith and associates confirmed these statements in a series of lime and fertilizer experiments extending over the past three years. The research with major vegetable crops was carried out in 11 major production areas of the Commonwealth and was supported by funds from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

The studies show the value of having soil tested for lime and fertilizer needs. Soil sampling kits are available from county agricultural agents or from the Merkle Soil and Forage Testing Laboratory at University Park. The lab telephone number is (814) 863-0841.

In general, good yield responses were obtained with reasonable quantities of nitrogen and phosphorous fertilizer used on sweet corn, snap beans, and lima beans. Tomatoes and cabbage gave best results with nitrogen, phosphate, and potash. Additions of other nutrients such as magnesium, boron, or zinc did not increase yields.

"The first small quantities of fertilizer usually give the highest possible response from vegetables," Smith stated. "Our experiments also showed the best results when fertilizer was banded along the rows, instead of being spread over the entire garden or field. With banding you can cut your fertilizer use in half. Banding supplies a larger portion of nutrients to the crop than broadcasting."

The Penn State experiments support the general belief that magnesium should be applied in lime but not in fertilizer. It was noticed also that uptake of magnesium and calcium is enhanced by nitrogen and phosphorous fertilizers but is depressed by using potash. Thus applying excess potash should be avoided.

Smith says that high calcium lime generally supplies, quite well, the calcium needed by vegetables but doesn't supply magnesium. Conversely, dolomitic (high magnesium) lime supplies magnesium very well. However, research results have shown that dolomitic lime is a poor source of calcium despite its calcium content of about 21 percent.

Thus, to supply reasonable quantities of both calcium and magnesium, Smith advises using a mixture of the two types or a calcitic lime containing 3 to 5 percent magnesium.

The Penn State scientist suggests applying the dolomitic type limestone only when magnesium is very low is a soil test. Magnesium should be applied in lime, he adds, but not in the more costly fertilizers or foliage sprays.

Are some changes needed in farm organizations?

NEWARK, Del. — National, state and local public policy issues affecting agriculture are increasingly complex and place an ever heavier burden on leaders and members of farm organizations. "The time demands on active participants are becoming impossible to meet," says University of Delaware extension economist Gerald F. Vaughn. For this reason, he urges members and leaders of local farm groups to consider how they can more efficiently and effectively represent the interests of agriculture.

"I'm confident it can be done," says Vaughn. He suggests three main approaches for individual groups. First, review the organization's goals. Second, try to work with other farm groups where possible to develop a unified policy on agricultural issues. And third, strive to strengthen leadership skills within each organization.

"Each Delaware farm organization should have a special evaluation committee to review its purpose, objectives and effectiveness in providing the direction that an aggressive, competitive Delaware agriculture requires in the 1980s and beyond," the specialist says. "It might even be helpful to conduct a comprehensive survey of the structure and operations of all our organizations, to identify their strengths, weaknesses and needs."

Many times groups lack specific goals, a major handicap in getting things done; or there's confusion and uncertainty about them. "There may be unrealistic or conflicting goals," he says. "This means a lot of valuable time is wasted on unproductive activities."

Vaughn feels the Delaware farm community should strive for a unified policy and voice through cooperation among groups or, in some cases, through actual consolidation. "Few public policymakers these days have farm backgrounds and they seek a sense of direction on matters affecting farmers," he says. "But what direction is a policymaker to take when he or she hears so many voices, all claiming to represent agriculture and each offering different solutions to the same problem? Inaction or unsound policies can be the unfortunate result."

Some of the difficulty in uniting farm organizations toward a common goal is due to economics and cannot be eliminated. What's best for grain producers, for example, may not be best for poultry or livestock producers in the short run.

"But how much of the difficulty," Vaughn asks, "is due to lack of trust and openness within and among farm organizations? Might a group be so absorbed with its own needs and so protective of its particular sphere of influence that it fears its interest will be obscured by alliance with other groups? This is human nature and perfectly understandable. Farm organizations that rise above it in pursuing the long-run interests of agriculture are exceptional."

In a state with only 3,400 farmers yet dozens of farm groups, would Delaware agriculture be better represented by combining the resources of its farm organizations?" the specialist asks. "Would this be a more effective use of time and reduce competition?"

Finally, Vaughn feels there should be renewed emphasis on leadership development within local farm groups. In some, leadership may be too concentrated in one person, or decisions may be made by a few rather than a majority of members. Sometimes only a few people may contribute to discussions, while others remain silent or are discouraged when they try to participate.

"Farm organization leaders usually have plenty of production training and experience, but they may need to refine their leadership skills," the specialist says. "They should be able to organize and lead groups of people in a highly interdependent farm and nonfarm world. It's important that they manage the limited available time to work with members to address concerns, establish goals, set priorities, and reach agreed objectives. More than ever this means conducting good meetings, writing and speaking effectively, identifying, defining and solving problems, and working successfully with people both inside and outside the organization."

Vaughn suggests more emphasis be given to developing leadership skills within the farm community, starting in 4-H, high school vocational agriculture, and FFA, as well as in college agricultural course work, Cooperative Extension programs for rural adults, and training programs provided by farm organizations.

"A farm organization is most effective," he concludes, "when group goals are clear and realistic, leaders and members share fully in attaining objectives, and cooperation or consolidation with a closely related group is undertaken where appropriate.

Agri-Learn funds donated

YORK — The South Central Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association believes that there is a need for increased education of young people about the agriculture industry.

To back up that philosophy, the beef producers and breeders have donated $500 to Agri-Learn, a third-grade curriculum study guide developed through the efforts of York Agri-Women, and written by former Dover High School vo-ag instructor William Fleet.

The $500 grant from the SCPCA will fund limited numbers of free copies of the Agri-Learn curriculum materials to interested elementary school teachers, administrators, and related childhood educators and leaders.

Agri-Learn's curriculum guides include lessons on various segments of agriculture, including beef, dairy, poultry, crops and horticultural production and relates in easily-understood examples how agriculture contributes to the overall domestic and world economy.

Limited free copies of Agri-Learn materials will be available by contacting York County extension agent Tony Dobrosky at the extension office, 112 Pleasant Acres Road, York, or Mrs. Gail McPherson, R.D. 1, New Park.

Small farm guide offered

NEWARK, Del. — Small scale farming is becoming very popular. Both novice and experienced farmers have many questions about management; however, it's often difficult to obtain information that applies to operations of this size.

University of Delaware extension county agent Dave Woodward says the Ford Tractor Company has published a very helpful guide for small farms, "Enterprise Farming," which contains information on the following subjects:

Raising purebred cattle; guidelines when buying land; running a farm like a business; profitable monocropping; small farm tax tips; pick-your-own profits; money from hay; ornamentals as a cash crop; financing a family farm.

The guide normally costs $4.95. However, according to Sponsorship Marketing, the company which produced the book for the Ford Tractor Comapny, it should be available free at any equipment dealership selling Ford tractors.

KRAUSE

COMPARE A KRAUSE

KRAUSE

Krause Rockflex Discs are unequalled in the field.

COMPARE

TIE RODS AND SPOOLS

Alloy steel tie rods are 1¾" in diameter on heavy duty units (1½" on medium duty). There's a nut on both ends for easy servicing. Krause spools are ductile iron and weigh 20-30 lbs. each. Precision machined with large diameter bells to fit snug against disc blade. SPOOLS ARE KRAUSE MADE.

COMPARE

FRAMES
Engineered of super strength steel tubing with cross braces and gussets at major stress points.

WING HINGES
Krause uses big 1¾" diameter bolts on HD units (1½" on medium duty) with over 10" of wear surface area.

We have over 400 rockflex discs in the fields of PA, MD, NJ and DE. These Krause owners continue to prove daily that the Krause disc levels and cuts better than any other disc they've ever owned.

COMPARE

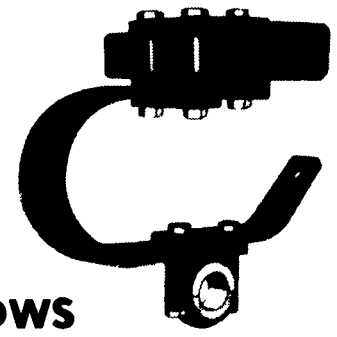
"ROCKFLEX" BEARING ARMS

Krause invented the Rockflex" arm in 1965. This C-shaped arm flexes over obstacles. It helps protect disc blades and spools from breakage.



COMPARE
PRICE: $ PER lb. KRAUSE DISC HARROWS ARE CHEAPER THAN THE MAJORS

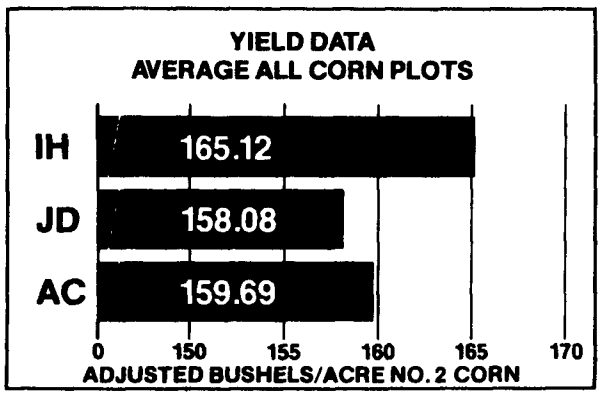
Early Riser Planters

PAY FOR THEMSELVES IN EXTRA YIELDS

Early Riser Outyielded Deere and Allis-Chalmers Planters in Independent Side by Side Tests...

Fourteen on-farm tests in five states conducted by an independent test firm confirmed that the International® 800 Series Early Riser planter can outperform the John Deere Max-Emerge® 7000 Conservation and Allis-Chalmers 333 No-Til planters in both emergence and yield.

THE FACTS BELOW SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES



Corn yields were based on hand harvested samples that were weighed, moisture tested and then adjusted for No. 2 corn at 15.5% moisture.

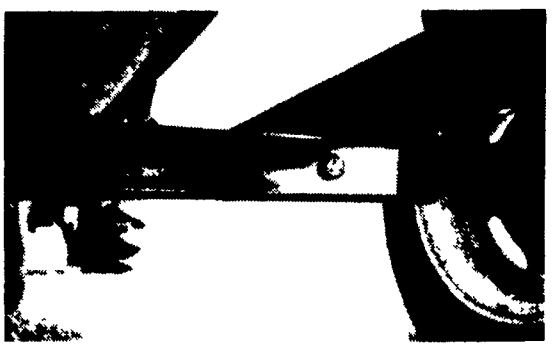
The E Z Boy's maneuverability on turns and its stability aren't the only features and benefits that make this an outstanding new product

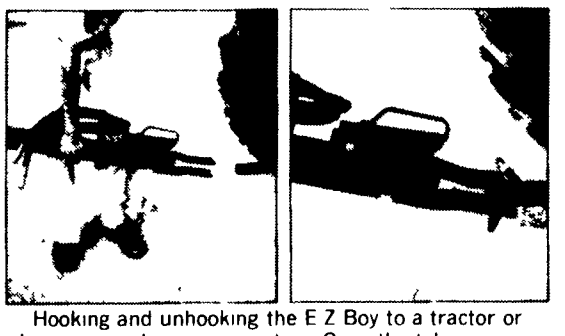
The Quick-Fill system permits the E Z Boy to fill itself at a rate of 125 gallons per minute

Adaptability The rear wheels are easily adjustable to six widths from 30" to 40" making the E Z Boy adaptable for a wide range of applications



A wrench is all that's needed to adjust the E Z Boy's telescoping axle to different wheel widths

The telescoping tongue makes the hook up operation easy and fast even with a full tank



Hooking and unhooking the E Z Boy to a tractor or disc is a simple easy operation Once the telescoping tongue is pinned in position the tractor can be backed up, locking the tongue assembly in position

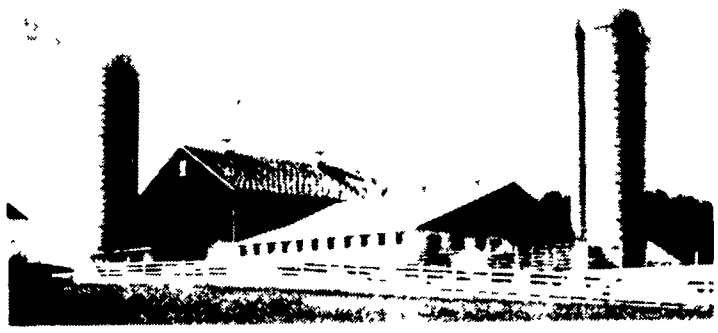
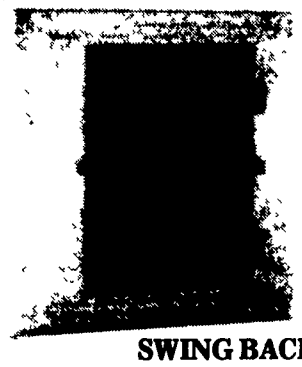
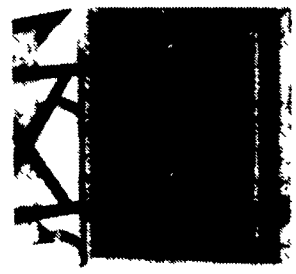
Dependable-Reliable
Systems That Assure Continuous Service Day After Day

FICKES SILAGEMASTER

Silo construction is not only an engineering science, it is also an art. Fickes Silos exemplify these principles, with their fine stave design and strength ... durability... and manufacturer's care in building.







SWING BACK HINGED DOOR

The hardware used in this door's construction is heavy duty steel with a double hinge system to allow the door to swing back against the side of the silo. A double lock system holds the door against the frame for a sure seal.

LONG'S GLASS-LINED STORAGE SYSTEMS

Long incorporates the strength of corrugated steel with a protective coating of glass fused to steel to produce the lowest cost glass lined oxygen limiting storage system for high moisture grain. Breather bags and choice of bottom unloader with tapered power driven sweep auger or standard 6 auger unloader with clean out sweep arm complete this system.

(2) OXYGEN LIMITING, GLASS-LINED SILOS

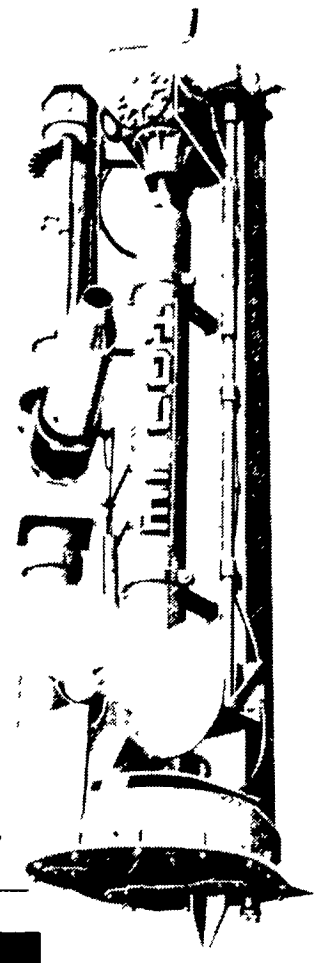
The MANURE PUMP with a BIG BITE

If you are trying to agitate and pump manure without this big propellor and positive cutting blade, you probably aren't doing it as fast as you could.



This big 24" steerable propellor agitates even the hardest of manure storage pits with heavy bedding at displacement rates of 18,000 gallons per minute. The cutting blade will chop long straw bedding and hay from feed bunks to mix it into a rich and creamy fertilizer. This pump is available for all sizes of storage areas in lagoon, trailer, 3-point hitch, and stationary models.

Don't be caught short of enough pump to do the job.

Call us today for more information or a free demonstration.

IS SLICK CONCRETE A PROBLEM ON YOUR FARM?

Now you can rent our re-surfacing equipment to return your concrete to safe and comfortable conditions for your cattle. The equipment produces a 2¼ inch wide band approx. 2¼ inch apart. This preserves enough smooth surface for easy scraping and enough rough surface to give surefootedness for your animals. Greatly aids in heat detection. We offer "at your door service" in a 10 state area. Prices are reasonable. Please call us collect for more details anytime except Sunday. Call (301) 790 1303 collect.

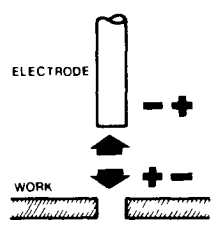
FIVE WELDERS IN ONE

295 AMP-AC/250 AMP-DC

1. Smooth - AC Welding
2. Force - AC Welding
3. Straight Polarity - DC Welding
4. Cutting Tap - DC Welding
5. Reverse Polarity - DC Welding

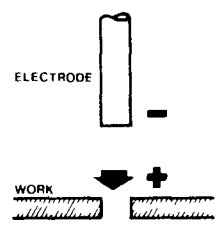
What's the difference between AC and DC Welding?



AC CURRENT
AC continuously changes polarity since direction of flow is reversed 120 times per second for common 60 cycle electricity

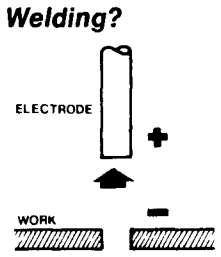
AC Current Ideal for
- Downhand Heavy Plate
- Fast Fill
- Aluminum T I G Welding with Hi Freq
- Carbon Arc Torch

This welder has two types of AC Current
1 Smooth Arc for general purpose work
2 Force Arc for carbon arc T I G attachments and new fabrication



DC STRAIGHT POLARITY
With DC straight polarity (DCSP) the electrode is negative and the current flows in the opposite direction electrode to work

DC Straight Polarity Ideal for
- Hard Facing
- Single Carbon Brazing
- Build up Heavy Deposits
- Stainless Steel T I G Welding
- Cutting Tap Cuts like 400 Amps



DC REVERSE POLARITY
With DC reverse polarity (DCRP) the electrode is positive and the current flows from the work to the electrode

DC Reverse Polarity Ideal for
- Overhead Welding
- Vertical Welding
- Cast Iron Welding
- Heavy Aluminum
- Rivet Welding
- Sheet Metal
- Low Hydrogen Welding
- Arc Bronze Rod

Comerford announcement highlights Beef Council meeting

DRYDEN, NY — The announcement that Peter Comerford, livestock grading specialist for the State Department of Agriculture and Markets, will now be working full time in beef marketing highlighted the quarterly meeting of the Beef Council of the New York Beef Cattlemen's Association.

The meeting was held at Tompkins-Cortland Community College and was attended by county directors and committee chairmen of the state-wide beef organization as well as by members of its executive Beef Council.

The marketing proposal which received final government approval was developed by the New York Beef Cattlemen's Association, Cornell University, and the Department of Agriculture and Markets. Comerford will work primarily with the marketing of feeder calves and fat cattle, and will work with beef cattle producers, marketing agencies including the organized New York Beef Cattlemen's Association, as well as with local livestock auctions, and with packing houses. He will work both to strengthen existing marketing systems and to develop new alternatives. Much of this work will be done on a one-on-one basis between Comerford and the producer.

"Marketing is one of our major concerns. We need both as an organization and as an industry to be doing a better job for the beef cattle producers across the state. This new program should do much to help the individual producer select the best market for his cattle and to market these cattle at the optimum time," explained Allen Peterson of Jamestown, president of the New York Beef Cattlemen's Association.

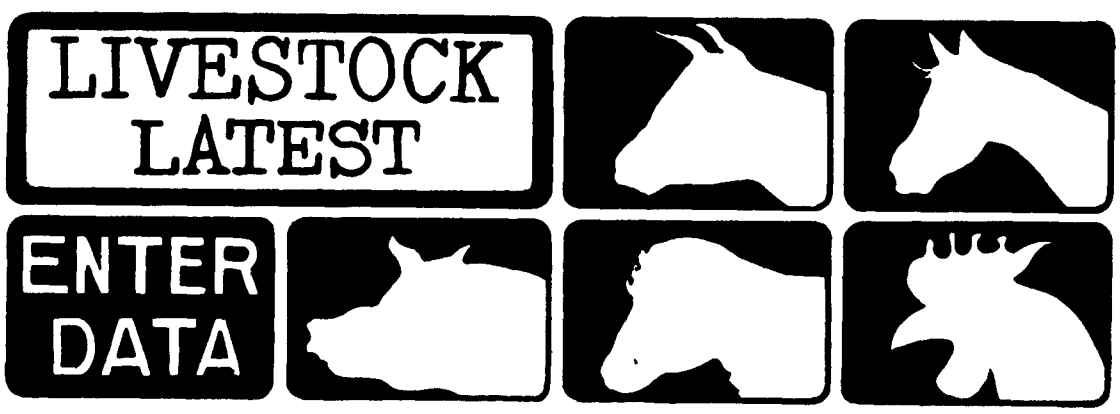
Comerford who has been with the Department of Agriculture and Markets for 25 years will continue to be based at Cornell. Specific requests for marketing assistance and more information may be obtained by writing him at Morrison Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y. 14853 or by calling him at 607/256/7712.

The Beef Council approved participation in efforts to secure a marketing order that would lead to a state-wide Beef Check-Off. The New York Beef Cattlemen's Association is working closely with the New York Farm Bureau to initiate this Check-Off. Representing the cattlemen on this project the Jean Shwartz of Earlville, Harold Maynard of Campbell, Donald Patterson of Perrysburg, Allen Thompson of Hunt, Henry Bono of Richmondville, and Don Swartz of Nichols.

A membership drive will be conducted again this spring and will be coordinated by the promotion committee. Council members voted to hold the annual meeting in January, 1985 in Syracuse.

The videotapes of the bulls on the New York Bull Test which is co-sponsored by the Beef Cattlemen's Association were shown during the meeting. Peterson said anyone wishing to view the tapes may contact his county Cooperative Extension office.

County directors were encouraged to develop county beef groups and to assist the Association in their respective counties with membership, promotion, and other projects.



Cornell offers tips on calcium rationing

UNIVERSITY PARK — A recent article by S.E. Ackerman and K. Keshavarz, of Cornell's Dept. of Poultry and Avian Science, discusses the problem of calcium separation in layer rations.

Appearing in the Ontario Egg Producers' Marketing Board newsletter, the report notes that the separation of calcium in layer feeds was observed to occur in all phases of the feed-handling system.

Separation of calcium in feed storage bins was found to result in variations of between 1-2% calcium during a typical three to four day feed-out period. Calcium separation in mechanical feeding equipment was found to result in calcium levels of between 4.5% to over 9%. The higher levels of calcium may have been an accumulation of finely ground limestone over a period of many days. Samples of feed taken directly from 11 farm mills had calcium levels averaging 4.7% with some samples having levels as high as 5.2%-5.4% calcium.

While inadequate calcium intake affects the production performance, excessive calcium intake could impair the production performance by reducing the palatability of the diet or by interfering with utilization of other nutrients. Consequently, while it is extremely important to provide the laying birds wiht adequate levels of calcium, both over and uncer consumption must be prevented.

The delivery of a high-quality, nutritionally balanced ration to every hen in a laying house is not small task. A feed manufacturer or farmer can mill a feed that is exactly right. But by the time this feed is augered into a poultry house and dragged 500 to 1000 feet, and every bird along the line pecks over the choicest particles, there may be little resemblance to the feed delivered to the farm. The separation of feed ingredients including calcium is going to occur. The further it is moved and the more it is agitated, the greater the separation. Unless a feed is pelleted, some separation will occur, but even pelleted feeds are not immune to some separation as pellets are crumbled.

Because of some calcium separation in augers, transfer distances should be kept as short as possible. In addition, augers should be kept in good repair to reduce vibrations.

When air delivery is used, a distributor or baffle should be used in the top of the bin to cause the feed to drop into the center of the bin.

Farms that mill feeds from high-calcium concentrates have a couple of options for reducing the separation of calcium. One option is to purchase a high-calcium concentrate in pellet form. Another is to substitute a part of the ground limestone with oyster shell or coarse ground limestone.

There is a consensus that large particles of calcium are less inclined to separate. Also, some consideration is being given to the use of low-calcium concentrates in milling feeds and then metering the calcium into the ration as it is augered into the poultry house.

One option used by farms that mill feeds is to mill only enough feed to last about one day. While some calcium separation occurs in the feed handling system, there is probably less day-to-day fluctuations in the amount of calcium consumed by a flock.

Since hens will pick out the larger particles of calcium and other ingredients, there is a tendency for these birds to consume excessive levels of calcium. To reduce this opportunity, feeders should be operated at as high a speed as possible. If the feeder line is exceptionally long or if the speed of the feeder cannot be increased, surge bins may be located at the half-way point in the feeder line.

One of the most important management practices to avoid excess levels of calcium due to separation is to force birds to clean up the feed once each day. When attempting this procedure, be sure some birds are not unintentionally restricted.

Study confirms value of poultry manure

UNIVERSITY PARK — A ten-year study conducted by C.S. Baldwin, of the Ridgetown College of Agricultural Technology, from 1972 to 1981, was aimed at determining the effect of beef, swine and poultry manure, with and without commercial fertilizers, on the growth and yield of corn.

The study also explored the levels of phosphorus, potassium, magnesium and pH as a result of these treatments. The poultry manure used was fresh caged layer manure, from a unit cleaned out approximately every four weeks.

Rates of application of five, ten and twenty tons/acre were compared with a control plot receiving no manure and no chemical fertilizer. Plots with poultry manure, with and without commercial fertilizer at 50 lbs./acre of N, P_2O_5 and K_2O were included, along with plots having no manure and two different fertilizer treatments, one with only nitrogen and one with all three chemical nutrients.

The manure was applied in late fall and plowed in immediately. The commercial fertilizers were applied in spring. Because of the long term nature of the trial, a wide range of planting dates (May 11-28) were experienced, while harvest dates varied from September 24 to October 22. Annual rainfall varied from 31.95 inches to 43.60 inches over the 10 year period.

Kind of Manure	N	P_2O_5	K_2O	Mg	Ca	Dry Matter (%)
		Nutrient*
		lbs/ton
Beef	11.4	6.1	14.2	2.1	5.6	24
Swine	18.0	13.8	9.0	3.2	10.4	24
Poultry	33.3	33.8	11.8	4.7	51.6	26

*-represents the 10-year average

This table confirms previous work indicating the relatively high value of cage layer manure, and also the fact that it contains relatively low amounts of potassium but high quantities of calcium (residue from calcium in the diet). The dry matter level reported is about that of fresh manure; manure from high rise situations or units where some natural drying takes place before the manure is removed might show higher dry matter values.

The ten year averages for the corn yield response to poultry manure and/or commercial fertilizer are summarized below.

Effect of poultry manure, fertilizer on corn yield, 1972-1981

Rate of Application (Tons/acre)	None	Commercial Fertilizer 50-50-50* bushel/acre
5	117.9	129.6
20	130.5	133.0

* indicates that N, P_2O_5 and K_2O were each applied at 50 lbs/acre

The greatest response to the poultry manure resulted from the 5 ton/acre rate of application. (This response was similar to the ones obtained with beef and swine manure.) The next increment of manure (ie. the 10 ton rate) gave a 10.4 bushel increase, while the 20 ton rate only increased yield slightly.

It is of interest to note that the response to 5 tons per acre of poultry manure was slightly greater than the response to commercial fertilizer when 50 lbs/acre each of N, P_2O_5 and K_2O were applied (117.9 vs. 113.7 bushels/acre). While the commercial fertilizer gave a worthwhile response when added to five tons of poultry manure, the responses when 10 or 20 tons of poultry manure were applied were quite marginal.

Another important consideration when repeated applications of manure and repeated single crop cultures are involved is the change in soil nutrient levels over time. As might have been expected, the effect of poultry manure at the two highest levels (10 and 20 tons/acre) with or without commercial fertilizer, gave rise to phosphate levels that were classified as excessive. On the other hand, potassium and magnesium levels were relatively unaffected either by poultry manure alone or in combination with commercial fertilizer.

Somewhat surprisingly, the pH (acidity level) in the soil seemed unaffected by the manure of fertilizer applications. This is surprising in view of the high levels of calcium found in the original manure, but we must assume that the natural breakdown mechanisms in the soil were able to handle the additional calcium carbonate in the poultry manure.

In summary, this research reconfirms the value of poultry manure as a substitute for commercial fertilizer in circumstances where corn is a major crop. In addition to its ability to replace relatively large and expensive quantities of commercial fertilizer, the use of natural manure is also extremely beneficial in terms of maintaining or improving soil structure due to its high organic content.

While the value of the organic material is much harder to assess, compared to the N, P and K, it is nevertheless an extremely important consideration. Factors such as moisture retention capacity, aeration, etc. are all improved by the application of such an organic fertilizer.

Good manure management means that every reasonable and practical effort must be made to utilize as much of its value as possible.

West Virginia adds bull test

GAP MILLS, W Va — In addition to the 218 bulls on test at the Wardensville Bull Test Station, 73 bulls are on the Southern Test at Gap Mills, West Virginia.

Buyers will have the opportunity to purchase performance tested bulls on the evening of April 7, at the West Virginia State Fairgrounds.

Breeds represented at the two sales include Red Angus, Angus, Polled Hereford, Charolais, Simmental, Ankina, Maine Anjou, Limousin, Gelbvieh, and Pinzgauer. Dr. Wayne Wagner, West Virginia University Extension Livestock Specialist reports that after 84 days of test, Southern Test bulls are averaging an ADG of 2.92 pounds, while those at Wardensville have an average ADG of 3.70 pounds.

The spread in ADG figures between the two test stations is the result of different rations. Bulls at Wardensville are being fed at high concentrate, 25% forage ration, those at Gap Mills are on a corn silage base ration; the latter resulting in a lower daily gain but producing an animal in immediate good working condition.

The two two-thirds tested (based on growth rate) of each breed will be offered for sale, approximately 135 head at Wardensville and 45 head on the Southern Test.

The Wardensville sale as in previous years is at the WVU Reymann Memorial Farm, 1½ miles north of Wardensville on State Route 259. This year's new Southern Test Bull Sale is located on the State Fairgrounds.

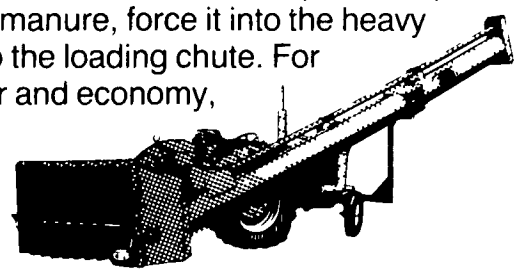
You can bet on the spread from Hedlund-Martin

Equipment to solve your manure handling problems.

Save your time and money by using machinery designed to bridge the gap between liquid and solid manure handling:

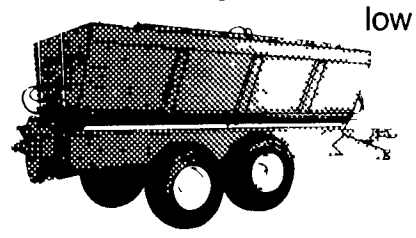
The Equalizer

Loads manure too thick to pump and too thin to bucket. Powerful blades in the scoop break up the most crusted manure, force it into the heavy auger, and up the loading chute. For loading power and economy, there's nothing like the Equalizer.



The Vanguard

Hauls liquid and semi-solid manure fast, up to 600 gallons per minute. Capacities range from 1575 to 3300 gallons. With the Vanguard you get a low cost-to-capacity ratio, low maintenance, and extra heavy construction for years of tough use.



The Scavenger II

The ultimate machine to handle all your manure, year 'round. Handles liquids, semi-solids, pen or pack, even frozen manure. Unloads faster and uses less horsepower than a flail spreader. The Scavenger II has heavy duty chain drive and rugged construction throughout. You'll get an appreciative look. Your first glance will tell you the Scavenger II is unlike any spreader you've ever seen.

Carpenter shows Grand Champion at Louisville Barrow Show

LOUISVILLE, KY — During the Silver Anniversary of the Louisville Barrow Show, March 12-13, some of the nation's finest market hogs and purebred swine were shown to judges as swine producers competed for top honors. Four hundred and four barrows were shown in the Open Barrow Show, matching last year's record number of entries, and 183 head of purebred stock were shown, representing eight swine breeds including: Yorkshire, Duroc, Chester White, Spotted, Hampshire, Poland China, Berkshire and Landrace.

Following stiff competition in Open Barrow events at the Louisville Barrow Show a swine producer from Indiana walked away with Overall Grand Champion honors. Warren Carpenter of LaPorte, Ind., took the top spot, beating 403 other entries for the honor. Mr. Carpenter's entry was a Hampshire Crossbred.

Overall Reserve Grand Champion was earned by a swine producer who makes his home deeper in the Midwest. Bob Brown of Laurel, Iowa, captured the second position with his Duroc Crossbred animal.

Manager of the Louisville Barrow Show, Dennis O. Liptrap, said entries in the 1984 show were representative of the type swine currently being produced on American farms to satisfy consumer demands. "The animals we saw this year showed evidence of being efficient to produce by being first-gaining animals which produce carcasses with an acceptable lean to fat ratio," said Liptrap.

Continuing, he noted that intense breeding programs on swine operations across the country have produced a new type of stock in the past three years.

"We're marketing high quality swine with less fat and more lean meat . . . producers in the industry have responded quickly as the market has changed," said Dr. Liptrap.

As one who is active in both the management of swine shows and as a professional swine specialist at the University of Kentucky, Dr. Liptrap confirms that the leaner trend in pork production is a solid movement in the nation, the direct result of consumer demand which has been met by an increasingly progressive pork industry.

Foundation stock represents the backbone of market swine production on America's farms, and the Louisville Barrow Show, as a result, also features a well-respected Purebred Show. According to Dr. Liptrap, the purebred portion of the Louisville Barrow Show provides producers another dimension in which to show their foundation stock.

Both boars and gilts are shown in purebred classes, with champions and reserve champions chosen from each of the breeds represented. Eight purebred classes featured sixteen winners at the 25th Louisville Barrow Show.

Breed Champions were: Yorkshire-Warren Beeler, Caneyville, Ky; Duroc--Bob Brown, Laurel, Iowa; Chester White--Parkison & Rodibaugh, Renssalaer, Ind.; Spotted--Keith Iberg, Highland, Ill.; Hampshire--Warren Carpenter, LaPorte, Ind.; Poland China--J.R. Beatty, Avon, Ill., Berkshire--Sean Huff, Washington Court House, Ohio;

W. Va. beef referendum set for April 6

MONTROSE, W. Va. — The Beef Industry Self-Improvement Program passed by state legislators in 1983 now awaits ratification by West Virginia's beef producers on Friday, April 6, at University Extension offices in each county of the state.

If implemented, the Beef Check-Off Program, as it is commonly known, would assess $1.00 per head of all cattle sold in West Virginia for use in promoting beef on the state and national levels, and improving sales and profitability of West Virginia's beef industry in general.

According to Dr. M.R. McClung, secretary-treasurer of the West Virginia Cattlemen's Association (WVCA), chances for passage of the program are "very good", despite the hindrance an 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. voting time poses for those who work off-the-farm jobs during those hours. In addition to the WVCA, the Check-Off Program has received public endorsement by the W. Va. Farm Bureau, the WVDHIA, and state Angus, Charolais, Polled Hereford, and Simmental associations.

If approved, the program would be under the direction of a governor-appointed assessment board. Made up of six beef producers, one dairy producer, one public livestock market representative and one meat packer, the nine-member board would decide how funds collected are to be used. Producer input would be solicited to assist the board in decision-making.

A built-in safety valve of the program allows for any individual paying an assessment the right to full refund of all fees paid, in the event the producer feels the program is not working in his/her best interests.

Embryo flush tops Wye sale

QUEENSTOWN, Md. — A total of 50 animals and one embryo flush were sold at the Wye Angus University of Maryland Foundation's Sixth Annual Production Sale in Queenstown, Maryland on Tuesday.

The event's high seller was an embryo flush purchased by Back Gate Angus Ranch, of Cameron, Mont. For $8,100 Back Gate buys the right to choose a Wye cow to be inseminated by the bull of the ranch's choice.

At $5,500, Ladylove of Wye (2281) led the field of 21 cow/calf entries. Sired by Franchester of Wye, Ladylove was purchased by Ballantrai Angus Farm, Westfield, NY.

Second highest seller in the cow/calf category was Maybel of Wye (2501), a Conan daughter, sold to Scott Crawford of Platte City, Mo., for $3,300.

Farrier of Wye UMF (5282), at $5,000, was the top seller among the 29 bulls sold. A son of Fantom of Wye, Farrier was purchased by Frank Hinkson, Friona, Texas.

Running second place was Bondsman of Wye, UMF (5325), a Landau son, bought by Keyacre Farms, of Lynchburg, Va., for $4,400.

Receipts for the 51 animals sold totalled $109,050, for a sale average of $2,138. The sale's auctioneer was Mike Jones of Georgia.

Weis Markets hosts growers

SUNBURY — Over 150 Pennsylvania fruit and vegetable growers were guests of Weis Markets at a dinner meeting held at the Country Cupboard Restaurant in Union County.

The growers are all participants in a Grower-Distributor group composed of farmers who grow and sell all or part of their crops to Weis Markets.

George Michalak, Vice President for Weis Markets, was joined at the meeting by Pennsylvania officials and legislators in reviewing the efforts in agriculture during the past year.

Secretary of Agriculture, Penrose Hallowell, told the growers that agriculture is now Pennsylvania's number one industry with farm receipts totalling more than $3 billion annually. Also, he added, Pennsylvania's family of 59,000 farmers, who represent our proud heritage, are today's most valuable resource.

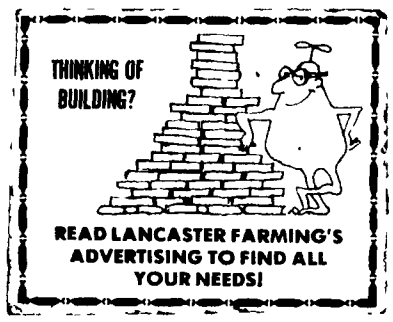
Other featured speakers included U.S. Congressman, George Gekas, House Representatives, Merle Phillips and John Showers.

The purchase of local products contributes to the strength of our states' economy, providing a broader tax base, and creating more jobs as well as providing consumers with fresh, quality products at Weis Markets.

Throughout the year, Weis Markets with the help of the growers and the Department of Agriculture participated in the promotion of Pennsylvania products. This effort, according to Secretary Hallowell, made a meaningful contribution to increasing customer visibility and awareness of the goods produced in the Commonwealth.

Last year, Weis Markets purchased a total value of $55,201,825 of Pennsylvania Farm Fresh Product, an increase in value of 37% over the previous year.

The meeting was concluded by discussing the diversity of agriculture within the Commonwealth as well as the plans made to keep agriculture, Pennsylvania's number one industry.



Swine is King at Tri-County Open House

BY JACK HUBLEY

LEBANON — More than 200 farmers celebrated National Ag Day on Tuesday, March 20, by attending Tri-County Swine Systems' Open House and Sales Days at their Evergreen Road location in Lebanon.

The highlight of the company's week-long open house, Ag Day events included guest speakers covering all phases of the hog industry, and lunch for all in attendance.

Following a 10 a.m. registration, the morning's first speaker was Ray Martin with his presentation entitled, "Management—A Key to Success". The president of R. Martin Structures of Ontario, Martin stated that today's family farm must be treated as the family business. He stressed the importance of thorough record keeping in an effort to locate and overhaul those segments of the operation not showing a profit. Farmers today, Martin stated, are not dealing in a county or a state, but a world market.

Martin's talk was followed by Dr. Bill Henning, Penn State extension meat specialist, who's presentation entitled, "Producing a Top Quality Hog", showed farmers what to look for in a quality hog carcass.

Following lunch, Steve Marbery, editor of Pig American, took a look at future trends in the hog industry, with comparisons to the hog farming of 25 years ago.

Stating that the major shift in hog farming has been from extensive to intensive, Marbery presented some supportive statistics. Although the number of U.S. farms maintaining an inventory of hogs has dropped from two million in 1959, to 500,000 in 1983, last year farmers produced about 15 million more hogs than the 85 million produced in 1959.

This trend toward larger and more efficient producers will continue, Marbery projects, resulting in an additional reduction of as many as 400,000 producers by the year 2,000. Marbery also believes that these changes will be accompanied by more standardized production equipment, and breakthroughs in disease control.

The afternoon's second speaker was David Hartman, an agricultural consultant with the Wisconsin-based Kinetic Consulting Inc. Stating that the average cost of hog production is about $.50 a pound, Hartman stressed that each farmer must analyze his own costs in order to determine profitability.

The day's final speaker was Eric Schmitt, a Berks County farmer with a 70 sow, farrow-feeder unit. Speaking from his own experience, Schmitt outlined how computers can streamline modern hog production.

With demonstration computers and software on display during the entire week of open house, farmers were given an introduction to Automatic Feeding Systems' totally computerized milling system.

One of the featured speakers for Tri-County Swine Systems' Open House on March 20, was Steve Marbery, editor of Pig American.

Wonsidler gets AC sales honor

Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Wonsidler, of C.J. Wonsidler Bros., Trumbauersville Rd., R1 Quakertown, were among representatives of 68 Allis-Chalmers agricultural equipment dealers throughout North American recently named to the company's 1983 national "Circle of Honor."

The "Circle of Honor" program recognizes Allis-Chalmers dealers for outstanding achievement in agricultural equipment sales. As honorees, Charles and Ruth Wondsidler recently joined other top AC dealers from the U.S. and Canada on a five-day trip to Acapulco, Mexico.

Wonsidler Bros. has been an Allis-Chalmers dealer for 15 years.

Avoid soil compaction problems

DEKALB, Il. — Soil compaction is the moving together of soil particles by external forces such as implement travel, falling rain, or livestock traffic. Ideally, a soil should consist of 50% pore space; half of this for air and half for water. When this pore space is reduced, normal root development and functions would be affected and result in yield loss. Severe compaction can result in a 30 to 40% yield reduction in corn or soybeans, according to University of Kentucky research. Findings at the University of Illinois indicate the effect of compaction can last up to three years.

There are four basic reasons for the current increase in soil compaction. First, new machinery equipped with bigger tires can work in wetter soils than older equipment could. Large grain carts and floater fertilizer spreaders are but two examples.

Early planting, which insures maximum yield potential, can result in compaction if the soil is worked too wet.

Third, fewer meadow crops, such as alfalfa, are used in a crop rotation. In addition to adding organic matter, their root systems improve soil tilth and structure.

Finally, overuse of the disk results in soil compaction. Each disk blade exerts tremendous pressure on the soil, at the point of contact.

There are both visual plant and soil symptoms that can indicate compaction problems. Some of the plant symptoms observed during the growing season include: distorted stem shoots, uneven plant emergence, variable sized plants, wilted plants, and abnormal leaf color. Soil crusts, soil cracks, standing water, and excessive soil erosion are a few soil symptoms that indicate compaction. Plant symptoms of compaction can resemble symptoms caused by other factors such as dry weather, plant nutrient deficiency, and diseases. However, even in these instances, compaction can cause more acute symptoms.

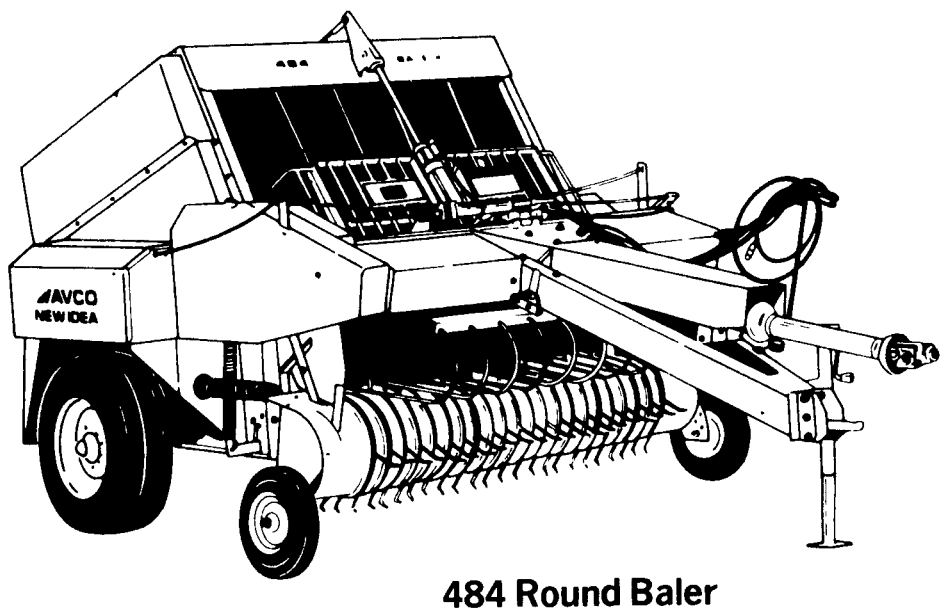
To reduce compaction, follow these management practices: 1) Reduce tillage travel. Combine as many field operations as possible into one trip. Try no-till or minimum tillage; 2) Don't till or travel on wet soils; 3) Improve soil drainage. Soils will warm faster and can be worked sooner; 4) Increase organic matter by use of crop residue, deep rooted forage crops, or manure; 5) Remove added weight from equipment when not needed.

"It's a fact. We haven't found anything we can't bale."

Strong on Value!

Fact: Now you can make better bales. Model 484 makes a bale 5 x 4 ft. weighing up to 900 lbs. Bale weight depends on crop.

Fact: The Model 484 allows you to eject bales without backing away from the windrow. You spend more time baling, less time backing.



484 Round Baler

Fact: The Avco New Idea fixed baling chamber with open throat design has fewer moving parts and more positive bale starting in any crop (hay, straw, corn stalks and other crop residues) than variable chamber designs. Simple design means less trouble, more production and easier operation.

Fact: Avco New Idea bales have centers that "breathe" to promote better curing, preserve nutrient value and make it easier for livestock to eat. The tightly wrapped outer shell works to resist moisture and reduce spoilage.

ABS bull barn covers 356 feet

DeFOREST, Wisc. — Imagine a building which extends the full length of a football field, plus both end zones and part of the end zone grandstands, and you get an idea of the length of the bull-rearing barn recently built by American Breeders Service (ABS) at DeForest, Wisc., for some of its expanding population of progeny test bulls.

This state-of-the-art open front structure extends 356 feet in length and is 30 feet wide. It has thirty, 11x22 feet, box stalls, each of which houses a progeny-test dairy bull.

Progeny-test bulls are animals between one and five years of age. Semen is collected from them at about twelve months of age and is used to breed a limited number of cows around the country. Those bulls are then put on hold while their daughters are tested for milk production and other important inherited traits. By the time a bull is five years old, there is enough progency information available on his daughter's performances to determine whether he is good enough to become part of the regular ABS breeding battery or is a candidate for the butcher shop. Over 200 dairy bulls are so tested each year.

During this four-year testing period of their offspring, the bulls eat, sleep, and butt heads in pens of about 15 animals each with their fellow progeny-test bulls. But, bulls will be bulls, and sometimes the play gets a little rough.

"That's the main reason we've invested in the large, new barn with its individual stalls," explains Gene Bass, ABS manager for Livestock, Farm and Maintenance. "The butting can cause heavy bruising and occasionally something more serious. Younger bulls seem to shake off the injuries fairly well, but by the time a bull gets to be four years old, he's not quite as resilient. Consequently, it's better to house them individually from four to five years of age. Even some of the younger bulls need to be housed individually if they don't adapt well to group housing."

The new ABS barn has all solid floors rather than slats. That's so a pen can be thoroughly sanitized between inhabitants.

Pens are cleaned once a week and rebedded as needed. There is a plank divider in each pen which separates the bedded area from the unbedded, feeding area. The gates can be swung to divide each pen so half can be cleaned while the bull is in the other half. This feature also serves as an aid in handling extra rambunctious bulls.

This new football field-sized (a then some) barn is but the first of a series of four to be built over the next three years. The additional space is needed to keep pace with the growing markets, both at home and abroad, that have made ABS the largest A.I. company of its kind in the world.

GILBERTSVILLE — Aggressiveness with caution was stressed at the annual farmers' meeting sponsored by the National Bank of Boyertown, on March 20. Held at the Gilbertsville Fire Hall, the day-long program featured Lou Moore, Penn State economist; Herb Wetzel, Penn State Extension; Gary Rothermel, PFA accountant; Ralph DeTurk, member of the board of directors of Boyertown Bank and retired voag teacher; and two local farmers, Clyde Masemore and Lloyd Zook, both of Oley.

Featured speakers at the farmers' meeting sponsored by the Boyertown National Bank include, from the left, Lloyd Zook, general farmer from the Oley area; Clyde Masemore, dariy farmer from the Hereford area; and Ralph Deturk, of the Board of Directors of the bank.

We not only need to look to the future, but we need to look back. We need to evaluate where we've been," stated Gary Rothermel, PFA accountant in his address to the farmers.

'Analyze your business on terms of strengths and weaknesses," he advised. Rothermel suggested to farmers to evaluate their operation on five points; resources, capital, labor, livestock, and machinery. "An analysis of your operation is important . . . You can look at trends . . . see where you're going to go," he told them.

Also of extreme importance in the 80's is cash flow planning and budgeting. "It's what you have left after the bills are paid," Rothermel continued. He told farmers to ask for advice, and then use common sense.

"Do what you do best, then be the best that can be," he concluded.

Lloyd Zook, Oley, told about his general farming operation. He raises beef, hogs, and grain and has been farming since 1962. He credited the Boyertown Bank for its agricultural loan policies and stated that there is a fine line between being aggressive without going bankrupt in the '80's. "We have to be honest with ourselves and our operation," he stated.

Because Clyde Masemore started out with 42 acres in 1954, he was told by other lending institutions that he was only a part-time farmer and was subsequently turned down for loans. Today, he milks 60 cows with a rolling herd average of 16,311 lbs. milk and 619 lbs. fat. His cows are home-raised and get fed out of a Harvestore silo. Milking for 48 years, Masemore stated, "dairying is a way of life, I feel there is a future."

Rounding out the program was Ralph Deturk, retired senior vice president of Boyertown Bank, past vo-ag teacher, and member of the loan committee and board of directors of the bank. He told farmers, "You people are in possession of great assets. If you're not sharper than the farmers of years ago, then you're not going to last long."

He advised using two questions when considering a purchase. "Will it produce?" "Will I utilize it to its fullest capacity so that it will make money for me?" "Don't put yourself into a hole that you can never dig out of," Deturk cautioned. He said that the bank does not like to turn farmers down but, "we're not loaning the bank's money to you, we're loaning your money to each other."

Also present at the meeting was James Boyer, chief executive officer and chairman of the board of Boyertown Bank, and Charles Gehris, vice president of the agricultural lending department. The National Bank of Boyertown hosts its agricultural clients to this meeting each year to provide a better understanding of the agricultural policies of the bank and to better evaluate current farmer needs.–R.P.

Ear tags

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — New, reshaped Permectrin Ear Tags have just been introduced by Anchor Laboratories for long-term insect control on dairy and beef cattle.

Permectrin Ear Tags will provide season control of horn flies, face flies, Gulf Coast ticks and spinose ear ticks as well as aid in controlling lice, stable flies and house flies.

Key features of the new tag include the wider top and narrower bottom. Permectrin Ear Tags are longer than other tags. As a result, they contact more hair coat and help spread more insecticide over the animal's body.

Banding can prolong corn rootworm control

LANCASTER — The trend toward making multiple or split applications of nitrogen fertilizer gives corn growers a new and possibly better opportunity for applying rootworm insecticide.

By banding a tank mix of UAN solution and a liquid rootworm insecticide at lay-by (cultivation) — a practice that Allied Chemical calls Feed 'n Bug — corn growers have the potential to improve N efficiency and prolong rootworm control. The result, in theory, should be higher yield and profit per acre.

Corn growers traditionally have applied granular rootworm insecticides through the planter. Entomologists say this technique has been and still is an effective means of rootworm control. However, in wet seasons or in fields where corn is planted early, some rootworm insecticides may lose their punch before rootworm larvae are finished feasting on plants roots.

In the Corn Belt and mid-Atlantic states, where rootworm infestations have been most pronounced, larvae usually begin feeding in early to mid-June. This continues for the next four or five weeks until worms reach the pupal stage.

Most rootworm insecticides used today have a residual of 12 weeks, entomologists say, and stay active in the soil long enough to prevent economic damage to the crop. However, microbial activity in the soil or heavy spring rains could easily shorten the control period to eight weeks or less, warns Dave Foster, extension entomologist, Iowa State University.

"That's when you wish that you had gone with a lay-by treatment instead," he says.

Applying a rootworm insecticide at lay-by is not a new concept. But the development of liquid rootworm insecticides, plus the popularity of making post-emergence (sidedress) applications of liquid N for greater fertilizer efficiency, has made lay-by treatments a viable alternative to at-planting applications.

As Marlin Bergman, extension entomologist at Purdue, puts it: "We've always known that lay-by applications, if properly timed, would give as good or better control than at-planting treatments. But, from an economic and logistic standpoint, it was easier to apply the insecticide through the planter. There was no need to make a special trip over the field.

"Now," he continues, "with more farmers banding liquid N at cultivation to improve fertilizer efficienty, we have a new and possibly better opportunity to get the job done. One provides the vehicle for the other."

Test plots monitored by Bergman in 1983 showed little difference between at-planting and lay-by treatments. However, he says, heavy rains upset the experiment to some degree by delaying corn planting for more than two weeks.

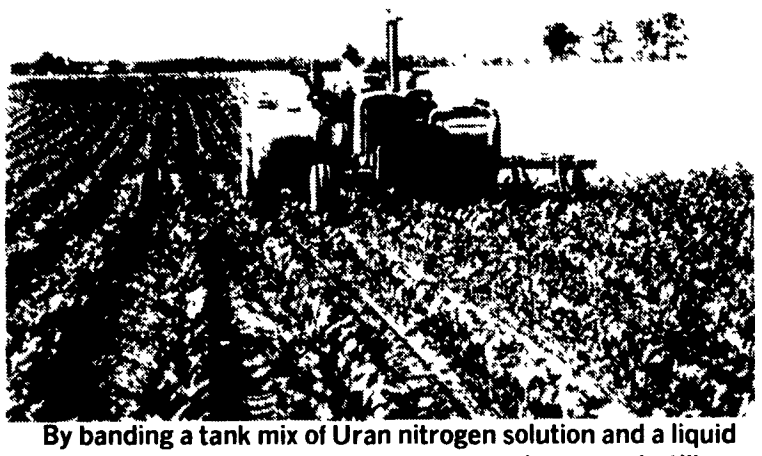
"Had that corn been planted on time — at about the first of May — it's quite possible that the lay-by treatment would have provided better rootworm control. At this point, we can't say for sure."

Working under a grant from Allied Chemical, makers of Golden Uran nitrogen solution, Bergman will continue this research in 1984. As part of the experiment, he says he would like to reduce application rates of some lay-by treatments to see if they equal the control of a full rate applied at planting.

One obvious advantage of the lay-by application is that corn growers can evaluate the quality of their stand before investing money in a rootworm insecticide. "If bad weather wipes out your corn crop, you may have to start all over again or plant soybeans instead," notes John Clapp, research agronomist for Allied. "This alone is a strong case for applying both your insecticide and part of your crop's total N requirement after crop emergence."

The only drawback to the lay-by treatment is the risk of wet weather preventing farmers from getting into their fields to apply the insecticide. This same argument is often made against post-emergence applications of nitrogen fertilizer.

But Clapp discounts this concern. "If it's so wet that you can't get into your field, then there's a good chance that you lost a significant amount of nitrogen and rootworm insecticide anyway," he reasons.



By banding a tank mix of Uran nitrogen solution and a liquid rootworm insecticide corn growers can improve fertilizer efficiency and prolong rootworm control.

For insurance, corn growers often apply 70 percent of their N before planting and save the rest for cultivation. This way, there will still be enough N in the soil to produce a decent crop.

Should corn growers consider split applications of rootworm insecticides? "I don't see where that would be a good idea," says Bergman. "You should be able to get by with making one or the other."

Lloyd Andersen, extension entomologist at the University of Nebraska, agrees. "But," he says, "if inclement weather should occur during the normal planting-time operations and you need to

Heavy weed pressure expected

LANCASTER — Farmers who participated in last year's PIK program may need to step up their fight against weeds in 1984, according to Kie Janzen, weed control specialist for Stauffer Chemical Company.

The problem, Janzen says, is that weeds grew unchecked and produced abnormally large amounts of seed in many set-aside fields last summer. Heavy weed pressure will be the result this spring.

"A lot of the set-aside acres — over half in some areas — were never seeded to a cover crop last spring," he says. "This gave the weeds a chance to come on strong."

Many farmers planned to control the weeds in mid-summer by mowing, disking or spraying contact herbicides. But timing was often the downfall of this strategy, Janzen explains.

"Some weed species germinate, grow and go to seed early in the season, while others can germinate as late as July or even August and still produce seed," he says "It's hard to control them all with just one or two treatments."

Even where cover crops were planted, there may be trouble this year, Janzen says. Oats were one common cover, but where oat stands were thin or spotty the weeds were able to come through.

"Sorghum-sudan covers are another possible source of trouble," he adds. "Most of these aren't 100 percent sterile, so if they went to seed they can create a wild cane infestation this year."

Overall, Janzen predicts that foxtails, velvetleaf and other common weeds will be the biggest problems on post-PIK acreage. He suggests several steps for dealing with the increased pressure.

The first is a PPI (preplant incorporated) herbicide treatment. "PPI herbicides like Sutan+ and Eradicane Extra don't need rain, so they're more dependable," he says. "With heavy weed pressure, don't risk a treatment that must be activated by rain."

Don't skimp on herbicide rates either, Janzen advises. You may even want to use a slightly higher labeled rate than normal.

Three-way herbicide tank mixes are another way to boost general weed control. In corn, this means a grass herbicide plus atrazine and Bladex for broad-spectrum control

Where tough grasses like wild cane, Johnsongrass, quackgrass, woolly cupgrass or wild proso millet have moved in, Janzen says Eradicane Extra with atrazine or Bladex is the only corn herbicide combination that is effective on bad infestations. These combinations are also labeled for problem broadleaf weeds like velvetleaf and black nightshade

Henke announces mixer

COLUMBUS, Neb. — The 90-cubic-foot Kombo Mixer manufactured by Henke Machine, Inc. gives hog producers quick efficient grain processing and feed mixing, according to Wayne Davy, company president.

"The Kombo Mixer is basically a stationary Kwikmixer tailored to each producer's operation with either a Henke hammermill or Henke roller mill and either bottom or side discharge," Davy said.

"Three heavy, reinforced augers mix and blend dry and liquid feedstuffs in three to five minutes. Constant mixing action virtually eliminates 'dead spots' and 'boil overs' in the mixer. A safety guard located over the unit's mixer bed helps prevent possible injuries. Energy savings are experienced as the feed mixer, alone, uses about one-fourth less horsepower than other mixers of similar capacity.

"The Kombo Mixer can be entirely disassembled for installation into existing operations. A scale for accurate measurements of grains, ground feed and feed additivies is optional. All equipment parts are readily accessbile for easy maintenance."

More information on the Henke Kombo Mixer and the complete line of Henke feed handling and processing equipment contact, Henke Machine, Inc., P.O. Box 1006, Columbus, NE 68601.

Rootworm control

catch up, apply the full chemical treatment on those earlier planted fields at lay-by time. The later planted fields can then be treated by planting."

Treating rootworms at lay-by may one day fit with integrated pest management (IPM) control programs. Entomologists generally agree that more than half of the corn fields treated with a rootworm insecticide today could probably get by without one. In fact, a recent survey by the University of Nebraska indicated that up to 70 percent of the treated corn fields in the Midwest are being treated unnecessarily, Dr. Anderson reports.

Why?

"Corn growers regard it as cheap insurance," he says. "For $8 to $12 per acre, they can rest assured that their crop will be protected from rootworms."

As part of his research, Bergman of Purdue is studying ways to assess rootworm populations a few weeks after crop emergence. Once developed, this could avoid a lot of needless insecticide application, he says.

"But today," he adds, "we simply don't have enough data to determine an economic threshold. We need more correllary date between root ratings, larval populations and so on before we can issue any rules of thumb. For now, we have to stick to beetle counting in August (of the previous year)."

Current scouting method for rootworms involves counting adult rootworm beetles in late summer. As a general rule, one beetle per plant is grounds for using an insecticide the following spring, assuming corn will be planted again. Rootworms are not a problem in fields rotated from beans to corn.

Farmers have two ways to band a rootworm insecticide with a nitrogen solution. The preferred method — the one used by Dr Bergman in his research — is applying the tank mix in a seven-inch band at the base of the corn plant. The cultivator shovel would then throw dirt over it and prevent any chemical losses to volatilization.

If a systemic insecticide is used, Clapp of Allied says an alternative might be to apply a tank mix in back of the cultivator shovel in a narrower, two-inch band. "The systemic nature of some insecticides will enable the chemical to be translocated to all of the plant's feeder roots," he says.

Liquid insecticides recommended by universities for lay-by treatments include Dyfonate, Furadan and Lorsban, all of which are compatible with Uran nitrogen solution. Some agitation in the tank is suggested. Farmers should check the insecticide's label for specific application guidelines and tank mixing instructions.

Corn growers should also consult their state's extension service for specific insecticide recommendations. Always conduct a jar test before tank mixing and applying any agrichemicals.

"Since purchasing our Roskamp Roller Mixer we have noted the following changes:

1. Better herd health.
2. Increased Butterfat of .2%, even though we almost eliminated bicarb from our rations.
3. No dust in the feed improved the palatability.
4. Less separation of the feed in our feeding system.

We compared other machines, but were not pleased with the long husks and uneven cob particles. Our Roskamp has more capacity - at times we use a Farmall M tractor and the self-contained hydraulics make it easier to use."

Buffer helps digestibility

LINCOLN, Neb. — Sodium bicarbonate added to a corn silage ration increased digestibility of both dry matter and fiber in recent research at the University of Nebraska.

Beef steers were full-fed a ration of 90 percent corn silage and 10 percent supplement, according to Terry Klopfenstein, University of Nebraska animal science professor. The ration contained, on a dry matter basis, either 2 percent sodium bicarbonate and .75 percent magnesium oxide, 2 percent limestone and .75 percent magnesium oxide, or no butter.

The sodium bicarbonate-magnesium oxide mixture significantly raised rumen pH, which in turn resulted in increased digestibility of the ration (see accompanying table).

"The bicarb-magnesium oxide mixture kept rumen pH in the range required for unhampered growth rate and metabolic activity of fiber digesting bacteria," Klopfenstein explained. "This digestion study seems to fit the theory that by maintaining rumen pH, cattlemen can improve digestibility of fiber in corn silage, plus counteract the acidity of the grain protion of the silage."

Feed intake was also enhanced by sodium bicarbonate and magnesium oxide. Cattle fed this mixture consumed 17.8 lbs. of dry matter per day, compared to 16.4 lbs. per day for controls.

"There is not a clear-cut answer to the question of feeding sodium bicarbonate and other buffers. However, there is certainly an opportunity to enhance utilization of rations by raising rumen pH through their use," Klopfenstein said.

Others participating in the research were Keith DeHaan, a former Nebraska graduate student now with Farmland Industries, and Bud Britton, Associate professor of animal science.

Select a soybean variety

LANCASTER — Spending a lot of time looking for "just the right" soybean variety for your farm may be a mistake. But, spending that same time looking for two or three good soybean varieties can be time well spent.

"Obviously it is important to find and plant soybeans that are going to perform well," says agronomist Bill Fleet. "But it may be a mistake to single out one variety and use it exclusively."

Fleet, an area agronomist for the Eastern Division of Pioneer Hi-Bred, points out that corn producers have widely accepted the practice of planting a "package" of hybrids to spread their risk and limit the effect of a particular stress period during the growing season.

"This practice is also valid in producing top soybean yields," he notes. "For best results, plant a package of two or three soybean varieties which differ in maturity by several days."

The Pioneer agronomist notes that planting a single variety on all of a farm's soybean acres ultimately compresses the harvest into a couple of days.

"In most cases when a single soybean variety is planted, the entire crop reaches harvest maturity within a period of a couple of days," says Fleet. "If the crop isn't harvested in those few days, part of it will dry down below the acceptable grain standard moisture of 13 percent. When this happens, income is reduced in two ways."

Losses

Fleet explains, "First, there is sheer volume loss. For example, 52.5 bushels of soybeans at 13 percent moisture translate into only 50 bushels of beans at 8 percent moisture. Two and a half bushels literally evaporate into the air.

"Harvesting losses also increase as the moisture level drops," he says. "Average harvest losses are two and a half bushels per acre. However, this can double or even triple when soybeans are combined too dry."

Fleet notes that there is a great temptation to plant all full season beans.

"Full season soybeans usually yield more," he says. "But, to spread the risk and avoid heavy combining losses, we recommend planting some early and medium maturing varieties.

"By doing so, the risk of having the entire bean crop at the same maturity stage during a stress period is minimized," Fleet notes. "And a range of maturity dates spreads out the harvest."

Choosing Varieties

Soil type and row spacing practices are two keys to determining which varieties to plant in a particular field.

Fleet explains that early maturing soybean varieties show excellent yields in better soils that have high fertility and good water holding capacity, but are well drained.

"Early maturing beans that are planted in narrow rows or are drilled will yield much closer to full season varieties," he says. "To get the maximum yield potential from an early maturing soybean variety, plant it in the field with the best soil and use closer row spacing.

"A full season variety can be planted on almost any soil type," continues Fleet. "And, full season beans offer more flexibility in row spacing.

Farm Credit News

Farm Credit issues report

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The nation's farmer-owned Federal Land Banks and Production Credit Associations reported increased loan stress for the year ended Dec. 31, 1983, according to the Farm Credit Administration, the independent federal agency responsible for their supervision, examination and regulation.

The problems of the borrowers are reflected in the institutions. Loan losses of Production Credit Associations increased from $159 million in 1982 to $238 million in 1983, while losses among Federal Land Banks rose from $1.8 milliont to $9.8 million.

FCA Governor Donald E. Wilkinson pointed out that loan losses were covered by reserves and earnings. He noted that both PCAs and FLBs had declines in earnings for 1983 due to efforts of the Farm Credit banks to reduce net interest margin and loan fees to help troubled borrowers.

He said the PCA allowance for losses account decreased 7.8 percent during the year, from $611 million on Dec. 31, 1982, to $563 million on Dec. 31, 1983, and net earnings dropped 70.4 percent, from $261 million to $77 million.

Despite the decreases, the total net worth of Production Credit Associations was down less than 1 percent, Wilkinson said, from $4.12 billion to $4.08 billion.

Wilkinson said the allowance for losses account of the Federal Land Banks increased 1.7 percent during the year, from $524 million to $533 million, though earnings declined 53 percent, from $598 million in 1982 to $282 million in 1983.

He reported the net worth of the Federal Land Banks increased 6.1 percent, from $5.5 billion on Dec. 31, 1982, to $5.9 billion on Dec. 31, 1983.

Based on historical patterns and on the variability of incomes of individual farmers, Governor Wilkinson said he expects credit problems to continue through March and then improve seasonally through September.

He said that what happens after September will depend on worldwide economic and agricultural conditions that will evolve during the upcoming growing season.

"We certainly hope these conditions will improve so that a good number of delinquent borrowers can become current and begin to improve their financial situation," he said.

The volume of credit extended by both Federal Land Banks and PCAs declined during 1983, reflecting the conditions in agriculture. The volume of loans outstanding from PCAs also declined, while amount outstanding from the Federal Land Banks increased slightly.

DuPont expands ag research

WILMINGTON, Del. — The DuPont Company has unveiled two new agricultural research facilities which extend the company's capacity to discover and develop new products that improve crop yields and control weeds, insects and plant diseases.

The buildings are located at the Experimental Station near Wilmington and at the Stine-Haskell Research Center outside of Newark, Del. Built at a cost of more than $60 million, they represent the largest single capital investment the company has ever made in agricultural research.

Approximately 130 university researchers, agribusiness leaders and government representatives attended recent ceremonies which marked completion of the buildings. The guests toured the new facilities and heard remarks by DuPont senior managers and representatives of the company's Agricultural Chemicals Department.

Edgar S. Woolard, Jr., a DuPont executive vice president, said the new facilities reflect a corporate commitment to expand efforts in the life sciences. "We believe the life sciences, which include our activities in agriculture and health care, offer considerable long-term growth and diversification opportunities for DuPont," Mr. Woolard said.

Dale E. Wolf, a DuPont group vice-president who heads the company's agricultural chemicals business, said the new facilities "will expand the breadth and scope of our efforts to find new, more efficient products, and will add tremendous impetus to a business that has been important to DuPont for more than 55 years."

Wolf said the new investment expands the company's laboratory, greenhouse and test farm facilities by more than a third. "These facilities are the most recent example of an ongoing program which has seen the number of scientists engaged in plant research double in the past four years," he added.

The new Experimental Station building, a five-story structure, contains more than 100,000 square feet of biological and chemical laboratories and 20 plant growth chambers. Featuring state-of-the-art equipment, it can house more than 150 scientists and support personnel.

At the Stine-Haskell site, the new crop research building includes 15 laboratories, 26 plant growth chambers and 16 large greenhouses. The structure, which replaces a smaller research facility established in 1951, can accommodate 150 researchers and other personnel.

The Stine-Haskell expansion also includes the addition of 100 acres to the Stine Research Farm where agrichemical candidates are field tested. The farm, with about 150 acres devoted to small plot tests, is now the largest of the 15 research farms operated by DuPont in major markets throughout the world.

KALAMAZOO, Mich. — A performance test comparing the effects of feed additives containing lincomycin and virginiamycin in broiler productivity shows lincomycin-fed birds produced more meat for less money.

The test was conducted on three farms in the Southeast, with 130,000 birds fed Lincomix, a feed additive containing lincomycin, and 130,000 fed an additive containing virginiamycin. The two groups were housed in similar facilities, with similar equipment, and the rations contained identical levels of arsenicals and coccidiostats. The broilers were also placed and processed on the same day.

The lincomycin-fed birds produced a total of 7,200 pounds more meat for $1,210 less cost than the virginiamycin-fed birds.

The trial involved feeding half the broilers lincomycin at a rate of two grams per ton in both starter and finisher rations, and a withdrawal ration containing four grams of lincomycin per ton.

The other half of the test broilers was fed virginiamycin at a rate of 10 grams per ton in starter, finisher and withdrawal rations.

Lincomycin-fed birds had a 5.6 point advantage in average final weights (3.874 vs. 3.818), and a slight advantage in cost per pound of meat produced (17.745¢ vs. 17.751¢). The virginiamycin-fed broilers had a .2 point advantage in feed conversion (1.950 vs. 1.948).

SPERRY NEW HOLLAND

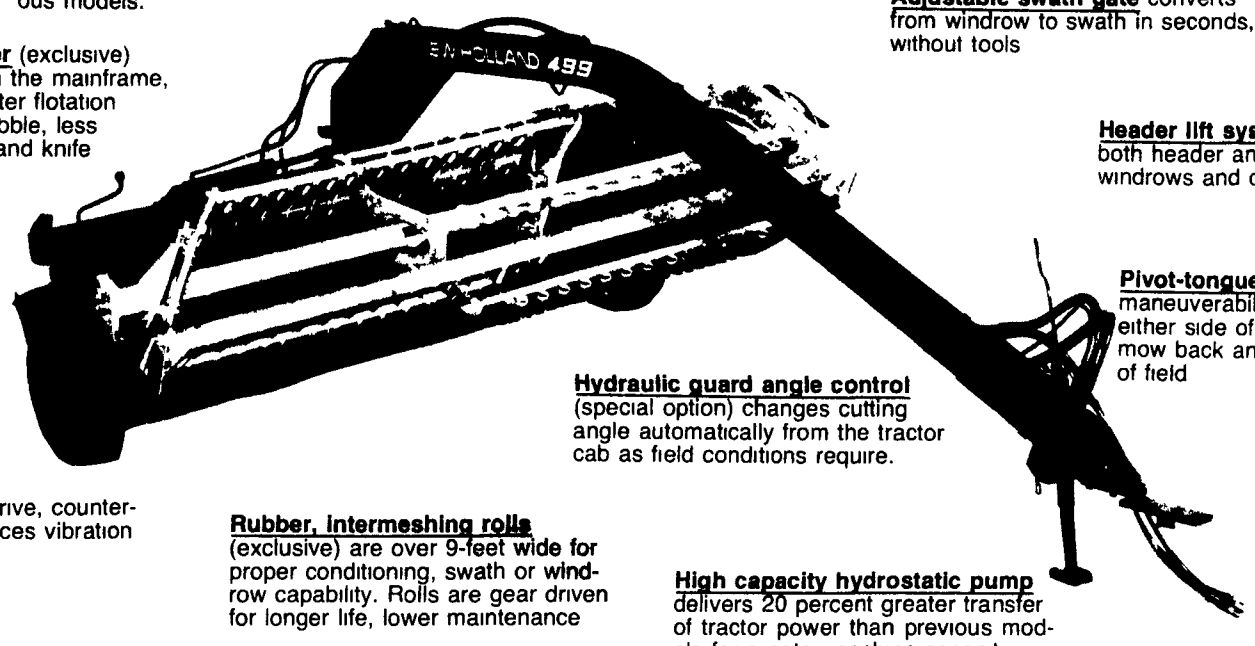
PROUDLY INTRODUCES THE MODEL 499 PIVOT TONGUE MOWER-CONDITIONER

Rolareel™ header (exclusive) with converging reel tines sweeps crop directly into rolls without an auger. Uses less power. Easier to maintain. Stronger tine bars than previous models.

Tongue lock (exclusive) holds unit in straight ahead position, prevents accidental swinging during transport.

Adjustable swath gate converts from windrow to swath in seconds, without tools

Lightweight header (exclusive) because rolls are in the mainframe, not the header. Better flotation results in better stubble, less damage to guards and knife sections.



Header lift system (exclusive) lifts both header and frame to clear windrows and obstacles

Pivot-tongue frame offers greater maneuverability . . operates on either side of tractor so you can mow back and forth on same side of field

Hydraulic guard angle control (special option) changes cutting angle automatically from the tractor cab as field conditions require.

Twin sickle, dual drive, counter-stroking action reduces vibration and maintenance.

Rubber, intermeshing rolls (exclusive) are over 9-feet wide for proper conditioning, swath or windrow capability. Rolls are gear driven for longer life, lower maintenance

High capacity hydrostatic pump delivers 20 percent greater transfer of tractor power than previous models for greater machine capacity

As a dairy farm business manager, one of your major concerns may be cash flow. If that is the case you are probably interested in getting a good, quick return on the dollar spent; if not, you should be - you should also be concerned about income generation and cost control.

I emphasized a good, quick return, and let me illustrate this with a few examples. When dollars are scarce, invest them in good milking cows first. As a dairyman, they are your best investment. They return a good income quickly; they usually increase in value as they mature and hold their value; they reproduce and so, your assets grow. What other investment can do all of this!?

A dollar spent on a heifer continues to cost you more dollars, and may not start earning you an income until a year or two later. That's a slow return when you need cash now. It's also a good reason why heifers should be grown well, bred early and brought into production at good size in 22-24 months.

By 30 months of age, a good, well-grown, early calving heifer will have earned almost enough milk income over her feed costs to almost recover all the costs of feeding her up to time of calving. On the other hand, a 30-month old calver may still be $800 or more in the hole. Which would you rather have? If you delay breeding your heifers because you want them to calve at a different time of the year or you want them to have more size, consider getting them into production first, as early as practical for your situation, and then delay breeding them once they are in production, while they are earning you an income.

To avoid problems at calving time the heifers must be well-grown! Be sure they are proper size for breeding, and keep them growing after conception. Also, choose a bull known for siring small calves and transmitting "easy calving" characteristics. Try to use a plus proven bull, too, because that calf from your first-calf heifers has the potential of being your best cow of tomorrow; don't pass up this opportunity.

As mentioned earlier, it costs a lot to raise heifers. Therefore, only keep heifers out of your better cows. To cut down on the number of replacements needed, do everything possible to keep those good cows, the mortgage-payers, in your herd as long as possible. If your culling rate is too high, look for the reasons why these cows have to leave the herd just about the time they are starting to really make a profit for you. Pay attention to details, and correct the problems that cause premature culling.

Machinery, land and buildings are necessary items for dairying, but it may be cheaper to rent land, facilities and equipment or hire custom operators than to own them. Mortgage payments on an acre of ground, for example, may be $400 to $500 per year, compared to $100 or so for rent. That's a big difference, especially when you are in a tight cash flow situation! Machinery is also expensive to own and operate. Unlike cows, it depreciates in value. Also, when you are running machinery you are not in the barn with the cows, where the major income is being produced. When you hire a custom operator, you do not tie up scarce capital; you also hire an extra hand in the process, which may free you to do other productive work or prevent you from hiring someone else to help you operate your own machinery.

Deciding which machinery to own and which to rent or custom hire should receive a lot of careful consideration. Consider the value of the timeliness of the job to be performed and the efficiencies to be gained by you owning and operating the machinery. Weigh this against the added cost of owning and operating machinery - the total annual cost may be 20 to 25% or more of the purchase price.

I'll be the first to admit that high quality forages are very important for a productive dairy herd, and the quality of the forage is affected greatly by the timeliness of the harvesting operation. You can harvest the crop at the proper maturity and get it in storage to protect it from adverse weather when you have your own machinery, if you have time and manpower to operate it. But, do you really gain enough to make it worthwhile, especially if you have to borrow a lot of capital and if the field work competes too much with time that needs to be spent with the herd? Sometimes, the added interest payments, the lost milk production, the missed heats, the increased vet bills and the rapid cow turnover can buy a lot of custom work and purchase some of the quality feeds that may be in short supply. It's something to think about.

High quality feeds are needed especially by the high producing cows in the herd. The mid-to-late lactation cows, dry cows and heifers can effectively use lower quality forages in properly balanced rations. In other words, you might be able to tolerate some more mature first cutting hay and some weather damaged forages. In addition to being concerned about producing high quality forages, it is just as important to think about how you can store different quality forages separately so you can readily get access to them, permitting you to feed the right forages to the right cows for maximum utilization and production.

How much land do you farm and how much extra ground are you renting? Excess acreage can sometimes force you into tight financial and labor situations. It may require additional, expensive machinery and custom-hired services, or it may pull valuable labor away from the herd. Or, if labor is tight, you may not get the field work performed on time; crop yields and feed quality will suffer.

Now that you've just filed your income taxes, and the income and expense figures are fresh in your mind, look to see where you can cut costs. Don't let Uncle Sam be the only person that benefits from the records you keep. Scrutinize your figures closely to help you analyze your own business, to help you find its strengths and weaknesses. What does it really cost you to raise feed? Can you do a more efficient job? Consider ALL you land-related, machinery-related and storage-related costs, including related interest, tax, rent and labor costs when you try to estimate your actual costs.

First, allocate these costs to crops in general. Then, determine what protion should be allocated to each crop. And finally, determine your cost per ton, per bushel, etc. Compare this with your DHIA feed costs. There may be a sizeable difference - perhaps as much as $300 per cow. The reason for this is DHIA figures do not necessarily reflect feed wastage and spoilage losses, excessive machinery and storage costs, the cost of feeding heifers, etc.

Adjust your DHIA returns over feed costs by the discrepancy, above, to get a truer picture. Also deduct other cow-related costs (interest on cow loans, bedding, milking equipment and manure handling expenses, bedding, supplies, vet, breeding, testing, registration, etc.) Figure the cost per cow. Adjust your DHIA returns again, by this amount, and you'll have a pretty good idea of the profitability of each cow in the herd. Don't let the DHIA returns over feed costs lull you into thinking your cows are more profitable than what they really are.

This does not discredit the value of your DHIA figures; it helps you interpret them more accurately. They are still the best figures available for comparing one cow to another, and you need that information! Having done all of this, now it's time to decide which cows you cannot afford to feed. And, don't overlook some of those ordinary cows with long dry periods; they're costly to feed, too, especially if they are tying up valuable stall space that could be filled by a good-producing, profitable cow.

Cut costs where you can, but be very cautious in several areas. For example, it still pays to feed good producing cows well; they are the profit makers, and you certainly don't want to cheat them. Preventive veterinary dollars help ward off costly problems, don't cut too hard here either. Similarly, good crop yields are essential for producing lower cost forages and to reduce the purchase of higher priced feeds. So don't skimp on lime, fertilizer, and chemicals that are necessary for good yields - not necessarily top yields. Do avoid excess applications of these materials. Soil test, give credit for the nutrients in manure and scout fields for insects, weeds and diseases before deciding to spray the fields.

Good production per cow and high yields per acre are important for efficient, profitable production. For example, 1982 Penna. DHIA figures show that milk income over feed costs was $1144, $1414 and $1717 respectively for herds averaging 14,240, 16,803 and 19,521 pounds of milk. That's about a $100 increase in return over feed cost for each 1000 pound increase in production.

Recent figures from the Pennsylvania Alfalfa Growers program indicated it cost $86 and $43 to grow a ton of hay when yields per acre were 3.4 and 8.2 tons respectively. Some additional figures from a recent Minnesota study also show that it really pays to do a good job with your alfalfa stands.

Yield per acre		2.4 T	6.6 T
Crude protein	- percent	17	22.8
	- pounds per acre	800	3000
TDN	- percent	52	62
	- pounds per acre	2500	8200

Don't be concerned about getting the highest yields; they may not be the most profitable. What level will be most profitable will vary from farm to farm. Remember too, top production requires sustained top management, and that can become very tiring, physically and emotionally. For example, top producing cows are under a lot of stress, and a lot of things have to be done right, and at the right time. If not performed properly, things can fall apart fast - appetite problems, depressed fat tests, twisted stomachs, ketosis, poor conception, foot problems, etc. In other words, know your situation and what you can handle.

It seems like we're in an era where it's going to be a contest of "the survival of the fittest". Will you be "fit" enough to survive? It apprears to me that we're going to have to focus on getting better - not bigger. That will increase, or help preserve, your profit margin per cow, and that's what will be needed to survive.

Chore Time's MEALMASTER FeedKar traveling feeder can help you get your egg costs on track. Here's how:

1. The typical chain feeder uses 1½ hp to feed each cage tier – 6 hp for a 4 high. Our hopper system, traveling on tracks, is pulled by a cable using only ¼ hp – a 95% energy reduction!
2. Cuts feeder maintenance and labor costs to virtually "zero." You know what a chain feeder costs to maintain!
3. Evens out egg production from one end of the row to the other – birds at the front can't "highgrade" the feed.

We'd like to talk to you about the other ways the nearly 200 feeders we've sold are helping owners. Our FeedKar is now standard on all Chore Time brood, grow and layer cages, our famous shallow PYRAMID and new deep PYRAMID, our 3 and 4 high SSS.

Find out more about the FeedKar – plus our line of cage systems and the Chore Time "total package" of feed bins, auger ventilation and waterers.

2 bulls named Gold Medal Sires

TUNKHANNOCK — Two Holstein bulls, 9H599 Sunny-Craft Chief Spirit and 9H622 Breezyview Job Royal Stewart have been designated as Gold Medal Sires by the Holstein-Friesian Association of America based on January, 1984 performance information. These bulls are owned and housed at Sire Power, Inc., Tunkhannock. A Gold Medal Sire recognition is the highest recognition for genetic transmitting ability in the Holstein breed.

Sunny-Craft Chief Spirit 1725714 is scored EX(90) and remains as one of the most popular triple-plus sires in the Holstein breed. His current January, 1984, USDA summary for production is +793m +.13% +53f +$142 with 80% Repeatability. His HFA Predicted Difference for Type is +1.03 with 80% Repeatability. Spirit is a son of Pawnee Farm Arlinda Chief, EX(94) GM, and his dam is a VG(88) Penstate Ivanhoe Star daughter.

Spirit is the only active Holstein bull that is above +700 PD Milk, greater than +.10% PD Test, and over +1.00 PD Type with a Gold Medal rating.

Spirit sires strong, deep-bodied cattle with wide rumps and good feet. He also sires overall udder improvement. This type pattern combined with the high test and production have made Spirit one fo the leading sires in A.I..

9H622 Breezyview Job Royal Stewart 1743677 is scored EX(93) and is the highest classified bull at Sire Power. His current January, 1984 USDA summary for production is +482m +.01% +19f +$63 with 82% Repeatability. His HFA Predicted Difference for Type is +2.02 with 83% Repeatability. Stewart is a Hillhaven Standout Job son, from an EX(90) 2E Elevation daughter.

Stewart is one of the highest PD Type bulls available in the Holstein breed today at +2.02 PDT. His daughters are tall, strong, deep-bodied cattle with wide rumps and outstanding legs and feet. He also sires strong fore udder attachments, well-defined center supports, and correct teat placement. Stewart is a good production bull with +.01% on butterfat test and he is breakeven on protein.

Spirit and Stewart both rank in the Top 100 TPI bulls available at number 20 and 79, respectively. These bulls were proven through Sire Power's GOLD Sire Development Program, illustrating its effectiveness in developing A.I. proven sires with outstanding production and type.

To be recognized as a Gold Medal sire, the bull must be in the top 15% of the breed for PDM and PDT and the top 25% for PDF. He must also have a PD% F of -.20 or higher, and not be a known carrier of one of the seven recognized undesirable recessives. His repeatability must also be equal to 80% or higher for both production and type summaries.

Master Mix donates funds

FORT WAYNE, Ind — Central Soya Company, Inc., manufacturer of Master Mix feeds, has introduced a program which will give funds to the United Dairy Industry Association and local dairy associations to promote dairy products The plan is called the Master Mix "Buck-A-Ton" program.

According to Dale Lybarger, marketing services manager, Central Soya will donate $1 per ton of dairy feed sold during May and June to the dairy associations. "Fifty cents will go to customers' local associations and fifty cents will be donated to the United Dairy Industry Association," explains Lybarger. All funds will be earmarked for use in promoting dairy product consumption.

"This dairy donation program is a continuation of Central Soya's commitment to the dairy industry," says Lybarger. The funds are intended to help dairy associations promote their products locally.

40 years of proof

Since 1940, Gehl has been building field choppers and forage harvesters with one thought in mind ...performance And, year after year, thousands of satisfied owners prove that we know how to use that specialized experience to build better machines. Today, Gehl concentrates those 40 years of chopping know-how into three fuel-efficient, high-capacity forage harvesters.

Capacity King 1250. The largest capacity pull-type harvester on the market. Gehl's exclusive 24" spinner delivery system keeps forage moving with no cross augers to plug The giant, 9-knife, 25½" cylinder gives a quality cut. And the new cutterbar adjustment is the easiest anywhere. In-head hydraulic knife sharpener and electric controls are standard too.

New mid-range 1000 gives you the high capacity you'd expect from the big 21" cylinder and fast spinner delivery system Like the 1250, standard features include the in-head hydraulic knife sharpener, adjustable axles, one-way shear bolt protection and attachment down-stop

Fuel saver 750 tackles just about any chopping job Uses less horsepower per ton chopped than many bigger harvesters. Uses less fuel. The 8-knife cutterhead is set into the blower compartment for smooth, continuous material flow Add Gehl's patented in-head hydraulic knife sharpener for even more cutting efficiency

Prove to yourself that there's no substitute for Gehl's 40 years of forage harvester experience. See your Gehl dealer soon

Jerry Webb
Delaware Extension

What a premise for a movie. World War III, the atomic war that nobody wants and it starts over a grain embargo.

I just happened to tune in a T.V. movie recently that dealt with just such a scenario. We embargoed our grain and so in a strategic move to free it up and thus feed its people the Russians parachuted a combat group into Alaska where they planned to blow a big hole in the Alaskan pipeline, cutting off a third of our domestic oil supply. From there it went into all sorts of high level conferences and telephone calls, various and assorted saber rattling and ultimately buttom pushing on both sides.

It started over food. Maybe that seems farfetched. But it could happen. Perhaps not with the Russians but with some other starving nation that needs our agricultural abundance.

In the movie the Russian premiere portrayed by Brian Keith told our president, Rock Hudson, that we had no right to deny grain to hungry Russian people. That food belongs to the people of the world and that no nation for whatever reason has the right to deny it. That's probably a fairly common concept in some circles. Certainly there are people in this country who feel our abundant food supply should be shared with some of the starving third world people.

I've always had trouble with that concept because I could never figure out who would pay the farmers for producing the food. In most of these conversations it's just assumed that the food usually meaning grain crops is just available like some wonderful natural resource that's piled up somewhere waiting to be used. Lost in the rhetoric is the fact that nothing is produced of an agricultural nature until farmers produce it, and the reason they produce it is the expectation of profit. It's all part of our free enterprise system. Farmers go to the fields each spring in search of income. Money that will pay the bills, send their kids to college, finance a retirement and take care of the day-to-day comforts of life.

To a starving population somewhere in some almost unheard of country that concept must seem grotesque. How can Americans let other people starve when they have so much? But another more important question, how can American farmers be expected to feed a hungry world? A world in which it is said half the people go to bed hungry every night. It's an obvious impossibility and even if a system could be found where all-out food production in this country could be made available to the world, how would it be distributed?

Starving people don't necessarily live in port cities where large freighters dock and unload much needed food supplies. No, for the most part starving people are in the boondocks hundreds of miles from the nearest seaport, many miles from the nearest hard road where there is no way of transporting food short of carrying it in on their backs. And then you must deal with the politics, the corruption and the disruption of a government system influenced by such outside pressures as free food. It's mind boggling to try to develop a plan for getting America's over abundant food supply to the hungry people who really need it.

Consider another factor. Our agricultural abundance tends to be in corn, wheat, cotton and a few lesser crops while for the most part the hungry nations are looking for rice, a crop that grows in only limited areas of this country.

Would somebody really start a war over food? It sounds impossible especially in a nation that has plenty of food. But what about a nation that is literally starving to death. If it had the military power, it just might. It's generally agreed that food should not be a political weapon but it is. It's part of a system that is so complex that it can't be separated when it comes time to discuss the non-food issues. We've seen grain embargoes come and go and we're still seeing their devastating effect on American agriculture. American farmers are continually yanked around by political whims and diplomatic adventures that first have farmers racing full tilt to feed the world and then mired down in a mountain of grain created by an embargo.

Yes, food has been a political weapon in this country and in many other countries and it probably will be again. Let's just hope it's never the basis for the start of a war.

KENILWORTH, N.J — A new vaccine is available to combat the costly problem of calf scours. Piliguard Coli-Bovine, from Schering Corporation, has been shown to offer significant protection against E. coli-caused scours.

The vaccine is administered to the dam, who passes protective antibodies to the calf through her colostrum. Piliguard Coli-Bovine works by preventing hair-like structures (pili) on bacteria from attaching to the surface of the calf's intestine. Without the ability to attach, the bacteria are less likely to cause scours.

In a laboratory challenge trial, calves from vaccinated and non-vaccinated cows were orally dosed with E. coli and then monitored for signs and effects of scours. Calves from non-vaccinated cows had a mortality rate of 55%, compared to only 4.8% for calves from vaccinated dams. Severity and duration of scours and degree of dehydration were greatly reduced in calves from vaccinates versus non-vaccinates.

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett
Farm Management Agent
Lewistown Extension Office

Farming has never been an inexpensive business to get into. It requires a lot of labor, a lot of capital, and today a lot of thinking ability. The success ratio of new farming ventures is not very high. Yet there are people who can succeed, especially if they get a little help. In the next few columns I will discuss some of the factors involved in "Getting Started in a Farm Business".

One of the easiest ways to start in a farm business is to join an existing business. This can be done through the partnership route, through the formation of a corporation, by developing a type of joint venture, or share cropping.

Partnerships are a popular way for a young prospective farmer to join a business. It can be a rewarding experience for all involved or it can be an economic and social disaster. People considering this route should look into a number of things before making a committment. (1) Will the prospective partnership business provide enough income for all parties? (2) Can the partners and the parners spouses work together? (3) Will the partner's families be willing to cut back on their standard of living if the business has a bad year? (4) How will the junior or new partner acquire equity in the business? (5) How will profits be divided? (6) Is the junior partner mature enough to accept the responsibility?

Corporations can be used in a similar way to a partnership. In addition, they can be used where a person is involved financially but not as part of the business. The same factors should be considered in the formation of a corporation as in the formation of a partnership. Corporations are usually more formal than partnerships. They also cost more to form, require more stringent record keeping, and may cause a higher cost in taxes. However they may save tax dollars and could be more flexible for junior share holders.

Joint Ventures or share cropping are also ways to enter an ongoing farm business. There are a number of different ideas for those who may be interested in this method.

1. A herd within a herd or farm within a farm: One person could own 20 cows with another person owning 80 cows. The second person may agree to allow the first person to use facilities, feed and equipment owned by the second person in trade for labor and/or management from the first person. Income would go to each one from his or her assets. Expenses above those designated would be paid by each party in accordance to the producing units owned.

2. Separate farming operation: Two parties could agree to trade labor, machine use, management skills but maintain completely separate facilities. This one could be useful for starting farmers with little capital but lots of labor.

3. An undivided but separate interest: One party could acquire an interest in another person's assets in trade for labor or management.

4. Separate operations using a common large capital facility: Example: Two or more parties could build a large farrowing center. Each one would get feeder pigs out of it in relation to his or her own share of the facility.

Dairy nutrition school held

NAZARETH — Lehigh-Northampton County Cooperative Extension services held a three-day advanced Dairy Nutrition School on March 13-15. The 14 students came from Monroe, Lehigh and Northampton Counties in Pennsylvania and Warren County in New Jersey.

The group consisted of dairy farmers and feed company representatives. Instruction was handled by Dr. Charles Gardener, veterinarian at the Ackermanville Veterinary Hospital; Richard Adams, Dairy Specialist at Penn State; and County Agents David Dunbar from Lehigh County and Greg Solt from Northampton County.

"We crammed a graduate level college nutrition course into three days" reports Greg Solt. "We worked them hard and long and they still wanted more according to the evaluations they returned to us."

"The type and level of instruction at a meeting like this just isn't available to the dairymen from any other source except a resident college program" explains Solt. "There probably aren't 25 other people in the counties represented, including feed company representatives, who have as up-to-date information on energy and protein utilization and requirements."

"Did it sink in?" "Well, our post quiz was taken directly from a graduate level rumenology course I had at Penn State several years ago," Solt responded. "The average score was over 70%". "I think that proves our clients can handle it."

The course included anatomy and physiology of the digestive tract, the chemical theory of feeds, energy and protein metabolism and requirements, the fads and future of feeding, ration formulation, and considerations in feeding the cow.

Selenium need discussed

COLUMBUS, Oh. — Dr. Harlan Bigbee, Director of Clinical Research for Schering Corporation's Animal Health Division, recently addressed members of the Ohio Veterinary Medical Association about the biological importance of selenium and vitamin E. He described disorders in livestock caused by deficiencies of these nutrients, and how they can be prevented by supplementation.

Bigbee explained, "Selenium is a component of the enzyme glutathione peroxidase, which prevents damage to cell membranes by harmful byproducts of metabolism. Selenium combines with vitamin E to act in other important biological processes, including reproductive, liver and cellular mitochondrial functions."

Disorders caused by selenium/vitamin E deficiencies include white muscle disease (nutritional muscular dystrophy) in cattle and sheep, and Mulberry heart disease and liver disorders in swine. "Sometimes little or no success is had treating these disorders, since damage is usually irreversible by the time symptoms appear," Bigbee warned.

Dr. Bigbee stressed that "prevention is the best way of avoiding selenium/vitamin E responsive diseases." Preventative injections of selenium and vitamin E are extremely effective in assuring adequate protection for cattle, sheep and swine. Selenium and vitamin E-containing feed additives are also available. Supplementation is especially needed in areas of selenium-deficient soil.

Bigbee noted "the extent of selenium-deficient areas in the U.S. is growing, largely due to effects of modern high production agriculture." He also stated that "acid soils render naturally-occuring selenium biologically unavailable to the animal. Vitamin E is not stored well in the animal's system, and is broken down rapidly in stored feed and grain treated with proprionates."

Dr. Bigbee summarized by urging the veterinarians to make producers more aware of problems caused by selenium/vitamin E deficiencies and let them know that these problems can be avoided by supplementation.

Equip farm buildings with fire extinguisher

WILMINGTON, Del. — Being ready to stamp out a fire at the time it starts is the best protection a farm family can employ to prevent loss. A few dollars spent now for fire extinguishers can save an expensive combine, rescue the farm shop, even save the family home.

More and more farm families are equipping the farm and home with this kind of protection - supplemented with smoke detectors to alert family members early if a fire does occur. In a recent Du Pont Agrichemicals study of 1,216 farm operators, almost 80 percent of all farm homes were equipped with smoke detectors.

The Du Pont study showed that while smoke detectors for the home are widely employed, fewer homes were equipped with fire extinguishers. Some 69.7 percent, or 7 of every 10 had a fire extinguisher in the home. Yet barns on these farms, equally vulnerable to fire, were not nearly as well protected. Only 45 percent had fire extinguishers handy. The big cost of machinery, and the need to protect it, was evident in the study. Some 79.6 percent, almost 8 of every 10, of combines carried a fire extinguisher.

According to Jim Borel, product specialist for Du Pont, sponsor of the new farm safety study, some reluctance to equip the farm with farm safety equipment stems from confusion on the kinds of equipment to install. His advice is to talk with a dealer or county agent. The big thing, Borel believes, is to get a fire safety plan underway before a tragedy can threaten the family or employees, or even the farm business.

Every farm and farm home needs three types of extinguishers as a beginning, Borel says. For ordinary combustibles such as wood and paper, a Class A extinguisher is needed. At least one should be readily available in every home and at the entry of every farm building. For flammable liquids such as oil, gas and chemicals, a Class B extinguisher is used. This is the type used on combines, in the farm shop, and any building area where flammable liquids are used. The third fire threat which is common on the farm is the electrical fire. For this, the Class C unit is employed. This type needs to be available in the farm kitchen, in the shop, and other areas where electrical equipment is used, such as feed mixing and grinding.

Borel says the correct extinguisher is important because water won't control either flammable liquids or electrical fires. He suggests that multi-purpose extinguishers may be the best bet for many farm locations. Extinguishers rated for A, B and C class fires are available as a single unit and are often used in farm homes and farm buildings.

Fertilizers and chemicals are minor fire hazards, but in event of a fire, techniques in handling become important. Ammonium nitrate and anhydrous ammonia are more hazardous than most fertilizers. A water spray will control both.

Also, vapors need be avoided by using a self-contained breathing apparatus or working upwind. Best bet is help from a fire department.

In the case of anhydrous ammonia, both water and dry chemicals (Class C unit or CO_2) will control the fire. The fire needs to be ventilated and the vessel kept cool with a water spray. Body contact can be serious. First aid is washing with water continuously for 15 minutes.

Should fire occure in a pesticide storage area, fire department help is the choice. Otherwise, work upwind to avoid any toxic fumes. If runoff water from fighting the fire is a problem, the area may need to be diked to control contamination. Even though such a fire is rare, its possibility presents a good case for maintaining crop protection chemicals in a separate, locked storage building, Borel says.

Loan campaign launched

CORNING, IA. — National Farmers Organization (NFO) has launched a campaign encouraging members of Congress to make the full $600 million FmHA emergency loan funds available to farmers in direct loans.

Thursday, March 22, the U.S. Senate voted to require FmHA to release an additional $250 million for direct emergency loans to farmers for a total of $310 million channeled through the Economic Emergency Disaster Fund. Congress earlier allocated $600 million for that purpose but the agency, in limited compliance, decided to make $50 million available in direct loans and earmark the balance for guaranteed bank loans.

"That procedure is not serving the needs of farmers," says DeVon Woodland, NFO president. "In changing the Economic Emergency Loan program from an insured to a guaranteed loan program, it became a $540 million bailout for the banks.

"The Senate took a major step forward in aid to agriculture with their vote," Woodland said, "but we are urging them and members of the House to make the full $600 million available in direct loans."

Drip irrigation requires good planning, design

NEWARK, Del. — "This winter I've had more inquiries than ever before from growers concerning drip irrigation," says University of Delaware extension vegetable specialist Ed Kee. "It can be useful and profitable for a wide range of vegetable and fruit crops, but careful planning and design are required to operate one of these systems successfully. To do things right, you have to understand the principles and work with your supplier."

Drip irrigation is a low pressure system that uses perforated plastic tubing to supply water directly to or near a plant's root zone. When used in combination with plastic mulches, it creates an ideal environment for crop roots.

Good quality water is essential for the system to work, Kee says. Sand, silt, rust or other particles can clog emitter openings. Well water usually presents few problems, provided a 100-mesh screen filter is used. A sand filter must be used to clean pond or stream water. And it often helps to chlorinate surface water as it moves through the system.

"Once you've established a water source, the capacity of your pump will determine how many acres can be irrigated at one time," the specialist says. "This is also a function of tubing flow rate. The manufacturer should supply you with flow rate information." Typical tubing has a flow rate of 0.5 gallons per minute per 100 feet. This rate is required for the tubing to work properly. If rows are set on 6-foot centers, approximately 7,200 linear feet of tubing will be needed per acre. With the above flow rate, the pumping capacity required for at least one acre is 37 gallons per minute (0.5x72 = 37).

"Besides basic flow rate data, you'll need the manufacturer's information to determine the proper row length and length and diameter of the main and submain lines," Kee says. "Most drip irrigation tubing is designed for runs of 300 feet, although some newer materials can handle lengths of 500 feet. If the main lines are too small in diameter, flow through the drip line will be restricted."

Most drip irrigation tubing for vegetable crops is designed for use at a pressure of 5 to 8 pounds per square inch. Two have enough pressure to carry water the length of the drip line, about 20 pounds pressure is needed in the submain. This pressure is reduced to the appropriate drip line pressure by a feeder tube, which connects the lateral drip line and submain. Feeder tube length can be varied to regulate drip line pressure. A longer tube will decrease pressure by restricting water flow.

Another consideration is where to place drip tubing in relation to the crop. With cantaloupes, which will be planted at the center of the plastic mulch, tubing should be placed 6 to 8 inches away from plants. Peppers can be grown in double rows straddling drip lines. The tubing should be buried slightly to aid water distribution and to protect it from damage from mice, insects and humans.

"Use pressure gauges at the pump and main lines in the field," Kee says. "They'll alert you to any leaks in the system. They'll also help regulate water flow from the pump so as to avoid having too much pressure, which could lead to blowouts in the feeder and drip tubing."

The average watering schedule for most vegetable crops can be either one to two hours daily, or three to four hours three times a week. This is assuming a flow rate of 0.5 gallons per minute per 100 feet and an average daily evaporation rate of 0.25 inches — a typical rate for July in southern Delaware. It's important not to get behind on this schedule, Kee says, because it's very hard to catch up.

He suggests individuals interested in installing drip irrigation this spring obtain a copy of extension bulletin No. 123, "Drip Irrigation Systems for Delaware Vegetable Growers." It is available from county extension offices in Newark (451-2506), Dover (736-1448) or Georgetown (856-5250).

"Remember to get the manufacturer's specifications as well, if you're seriously considering drip irrigation," Kee concludes. "It can be a valuable tool. But get started soon if you're going to install a system this year. It's important to plan ahead for successful results."

Corn growers honored

LANCASTER — A Lancaster County and a Lebanon County corn grower have received top honors in the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Contest.

Harold L. Brubaker, of Strasburg, Lancaster County, achieved a winning yield of 164.3 bushels per acre with Dekalb-Pfizer XL71.

Kervin G. Zimmerman, of Myerstown, Lebanon County, recorded a yield of 141.9 bushels per acre with Dekalb-Pfizer XL61.

Both growers received the commendation of Kent Schulze, vice president, sales and marketing for Dekalb-Pfizer Genetics.

"We are pleased to have our products showcased by such successful producers," Schulze said.

Also, Zimmerman has been a Dekalb-Pfizer dealer for the past seven years.

Dauphin conservationists are honored by Federation

MILLERSBURG — The Dauphin County Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs recently held its Annual Banquet at the American Legion in Millersburg. Over 60 Sportsmen and guests attended the event. Highlighting the evening program was the presentation of several awards for Outstanding Contributions in the Field of Conservation by residents of Dauphin County.

The First Professional Conservationist Award presented by the Federation was presented to John E. (Jack) Stepanski, Waterways Petrolman with the Pennsylvania Fish Commission in Upper Dauphin County. His involvement with sportsmen individually and in groups resulted in the formation of the County Federation three trout nurseries, and numerous stream improvement devices. Jack was also instrumental in organizing Conservation Clubs in four of our County High Schools and had assisted with Junior Conservation School.

The Annual Conservationist Award this year was presented jointly to Aaron Hoffer (Middletown) and George Moore (Millersburg). Both have served as officers and Directors of the Dauphin Conservation District for many years. Their contributions were instrumental in making the Conservation District an active and viable County organization. Both individuals served on many committees and represented the District at numerous state, regional and national activities.

Mike Schmidt, Assistant Supervisor of the Southeastern Division of the Pennsylvania Game Commission presented the State Award for the Outstanding essay on Hunter Ethics to Joseph R. Middlekopp, of Dauphin County. Larry Mummert, Instructor of the Hunter Education Course attended by Joseph Middlekopp, was also recognized.

Robert Megonnell, (Dauphin), Director of Junior Conservation School also recognized the following individuals for supporting the Junior Conservation School program. They included: Lee Warfel, Current Federation President (Halifax), Buss Peters (Harrisburg), Kay Megonnell (Dauphin), and Joel Myers (Dauphin). Bob also received a $250.00 donation from the AMP Nimrods Sportsmen's Club. The contribution was presented by President of the Nimrods, Brad Deibler (Millersburg). The dates for the 1984 Conservation School will be June 10 to June 16. Applications are available from Bob Megonnell or Joel Myers.

The featured program for the evening was the first showing of a slide program which highlighted numerous education experiences and activities provided at the School. This program is available to any interested group.

Dauphin County Waterways Patrolman John Stepanski with the Pennsylvania Fish Commission, right, is the recipient of the 1984 Professional Conservationist Award from the Dauphin County Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs. Stepanski receives the award from Robert Megonnell, director of the Federation's Jr. Conservation School, for his 16 years of outstanding professional service.

Together, Aaron Hoffer, left, Lower Swatara Township, and George Moore (absent) of Millersburg, gave 60 years of service to the Dauphin County Conservation District board of directors. They are co-recipients of the 1984 Conservationist of the Year Award by the Dauphin County Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs. Joel Myers, right, Federation secretary, makes the presentation.

South Central Pa. Cattlemen honor Musser

Jamie Kohr is the South Central Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association Queen.

EAST BERLIN — Paul Musser, Manchester, has been named the 1984 Cattleman of the Year by the South Central Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association.

The surprise presentation came as the highlight of the group's annual meeting, last week at the East Berlin Fire Hall.

The Musser family fattens several hundred beef cattle yearly, along with raising turkey and layer flocks, market hogs and cropping a large acreage in small grains.

Recently, they opened an on-farm market where they retail their home-produced meats and poultry.

A member of the Cattlemen's Association for many years, Musser has served several terms on the groups' board of directors. He assists with the calf sales and is a strong supporter of the association's various events. Active in numerous ag-related organizations, Musser is a leader in Extension and a member of the Executive Committee.

Also honored during the awards presentations was Jamie Kohr of Wrightsville, named the new S.C.P.C.A. Cattlemen's Queen. Ms. Kohr is a veteran 4-H member and cattle exhibitor and will represent the Cattlemen at various events over the year of her reign.

Four new directors won terms on the board during the business meeting. They are Kathy Wise, Spring Grove; Terry Shearer, New Oxford; Paul Musser, Manchester; and John Hausner, Dover.

Speaker for the program was William Henning, Penn State meats specialist, with a presentation on "The Myth About Beef."-J.B.

Corn exports reported

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Private exporters have reported to the U.S. Department of Agriculture export sales of 200,000 metric tons of corn for delivery to the USSR in the 1983-84 marketing year.

The sale is being made under the first year of the new Long Term Grain Supply Agreement, which began Oct. 1, 1983, and ends Sept. 30. The marketing year for corn began Oct. 1, 1983.

Sales of wheat and corn to the USSR for delivery during the first year of the new agreement now total 8,446,100 tons. Of the total, 4,204,000 tons are wheat and 4,242,100 tons are corn. In addition, 416,200 tons of soybeans have been sold to the USSR.

The Milk Check

Outlook

After reading all that's been written on the outlook for milk production and prices in 1984 and adding a few personal observations and a little intuition, I can at least agree that prices and production will be lower. Where I have trouble with most of the predictions is in the reasons for the decreases.

Decreases in milk prices are not so hard to identify. They will come from a drop of 50 cents in the support price and a 50 cent assessment to finance the Milk Diversion Program. Those we've seen already but they will drop even further with the usual seasonal declines during the spring flush and the take outs for the Louisville Plan that start with 20 cents in March and rise to 40 cents in April and May.

In Order 2 we're looking at the lowest prices in five years and nothing appears in the future that can stop them from becoming the lowest in 1985. I'm talking about cuts of $1.20 a hundred in the farm price or nearly nine per cent in the last three years. With farm prices averaging 60 cents a hundred less than a year ago added to a 50 cent assessment you're looking at prices well below $12.00 this spring and perhaps down to $11.50. Price wise that's putting you back to 1979. But you don't have to wait until the spring flush. By comparison, that's what you're getting now.

That seems like a big cut, and it is, but a recent USDA study report says that it would take cuts double that amount of 15 percent, at least, and maybe 20 percent, to get you to cut production down to market demand levels. That's what's planned for 1986 but you'll be getting some of it in 1985 when the 50 cent assessment ends, but two 50 cent cuts in the support price will take effect. So, you see, it's not hard to predict drops in the farm price of milk. You have them already and there are more to come.

Production

When it comes to the question of, what are you going to do about it, I can still agree with most of the predictions that production will be lower but not for the same reasons. Certainly the Milk Diversion Program will have some impact to lower production but I believe we bought a lot of air with the payments. Many farmers were already cutting production for economic reasons and merely capitalized on the program because it was offered, and these were not all small herds or elderly couples nearing retirement. I also believe that there were a lot of herds that were producing below their base but did not participate in the diversion payments, and my guess is there were more of these than the herds that signed contracts.

January was the first month in nearly five years that milk production did not exceed that of the same month the previous year. That 56-month stretch built up quite a momentum that will be hard to turn around, but I believe we've made a start. Much of the credit is given to the Milk Diversion Program and the sale of start. Much of the credit is given to the Milk Diversion Program and the sale of 77,000 addition cows for slaughter, but I believe a reduction was coming with or without the program and I believe it's going to continue. A reduction of over five per cent in milk production is predicted as a result of the program, but I believe we would have had at least half of that without any payments.

The principal reason is the erosion of profits with falling milk prices and increasing feed prices. Nationally the milk price feed price ratio is down to 1.34, the lowest since 1975, and down to 1.31 in Pennsylvania. If you take the 50 cent assessment out of the farm milk price it drops well below the 1.3 ratio usually considered the "break even" point. However, that's the average and some farmers were feeling the pinch since last fall and were reducing grain feeding and a lot more will join them this spring. With grain to milk ratios running one to 2.5 there was lots of room cot cutting. And with feed prices averaging 20 per cent higher than last year and milk prices down eight per cent there's a lot of incentive.

The argument that lower milk prices only mean higher production and more surpluses was all right when you were talking to politicians and trying to stop the 50 cent assessments in the last price support program, but it doesn't work that way in the long run when the economics of grain prices and feed prices meet in the milk pail. Certainly the most efficient or the most highly leveraged producers may continue to increase production even under the present circumstances but more and more will find that the less they spend the more they'll have to keep.

What happens next fall will depend on the weather and the participation in the feed grains program. Even fertilizer prices are being delayed while waiting to see what happens in the midwest. Whatever it is, I don't believe you'll see milk price feed price ratios back to 1.6 in the next two years becauses of falling milk prices.

Order 2 Pool

Prices in Order 2 are just a reflection of the rest of the country. The February pool paid $12.79 for 3.5 milk at the 201-210 mile zone. That was 56 cents less than last year and 20 cents less than last month. Taking out the 50 cent assessment you have a drop of $1.06 or eight percent less. January's price was a little better at $12.99 but still 36 cents less than a year ago. Increases in Class I sales for both months were higher in January than a year ago but lower in February (on a daily basis), so on balance your utilization dropped 1.2 per cent.

We haven't yet seen the decreases in Order 2 shipments that have been noted in other markets and perhaps it's a reflection of the low participation in the Milk Diversion Program, but I believe it has to come eventually as it has in other regions. March milk prices will be down 20 cents more as the Louisville Plan payments start, and these will be increased to 30 cents in April and 40 cents in May and June.

Reminder

Whether or not you are in the Milk Diversion Program, you are still entitled to a 50 cent a hundred refund for milk shipped in October and November of last year if you shipped 8.4 per cent less than you did during your base period months. If in doubt, check with your county ASCS office and they will help you figure out if you can collect under the old price support program.

The Dairy Business

By Newton Bair

WHAT ARE THE FARM RECORDS FOR?

We are all furiously scurrying through our files, desk drawers, and shoe boxes, looking for all the evidence we need for IRS on the fifteenth of April. I don't know just why it is, but somehow the major goal for many farmers at this time of the year is to prove to Uncle Sam that we didn't make any money last year. No profit, no tax to pay! Boy, that's a relief!

There must be something wrong with that logic. Especially since we have survived another year, paid our bills, and even bought mother a new dishwasher. Then why be so happy about showing so little profit that we don't owe Uncle Sam any of it? Let's examine that thought for a moment.

Granted that operating your business is a real challenge these days. But, try to realize that it has always been hard work and lots of headaches to make a living on the farm. The only thing that is making the scene different today is that in addition to the usual sweat, you have to be an expert business manager to make a farm really pay.

I'd like to emphasize the expert. Now, no expert is going to operate a business without PROFIT as a goal. So, along with the Good Life on the farm, making a profit should be our aim, and it certainly is no sin to achieve some profit, even if some of it must be shared with our Government. So, beware of some of those practices like investing in oversized machinery just to use up the farm profit to avoid taxes.

Of course, it's just good business tomanage proper expenditures that have to be made anyway. Pre payment of Spring supplies and timely visits to your friendly Banker to minimize interest payments can save a bundle, and any money saved will feel so good in the Bank account. And if there is a real profit, Uncle Sam deserves an Honest share. Would you really like to farm anywhere else in the world than right here in the U.S.A.?

IS THERE A BETTER USE FOR THE SHOEBOX?

The shoebox is only symbolic of the limited use many of us make of our farm records. Maybe the record book you keep is quite adequate for an IRS audit. But is it adequate for management purposes? What do your records tell you about the strengths and weaknesses in the business? Are they set up in such a way that a real business analysis can be made? Can you use them to find the most efficient crop program for your farm? Can you tell if it pays the most efficient crop program for your farm? Can you tell if it pays to raise heifers, or bulls?

Do you really know if it is cheaper to rasie soybeans than to put that extra land into good forage for the herd? Are you making good use of the labor on the farm, both yours, the family and the hired labor? Above all, does your farm show a reasonable return for your capital investment, both yours and the Banks? The Shoebox records, as well as many minimal record books, can't begin to answer these and many other vital questions that you should be asking of them.

CONSIDER A COMPUTER FOR RECORDS AND ANALYSIS

A computer will not manage your farm or milk the cows for you. (Although you would be surprised at the things they can do.) If you are still timid about associating with those mini-monsters, don't get discouraged yet. Visit a friendly neighbor who is already using one to manage the farm affairs. I don't mean someone who is playing games on a bottom-of-the-line cheapie. Today's farm business requires a computer with a sizeable memory and must be able to use the really good software programs that were developed especially for that brand and model. Some of the highly advertised brands will probably fall by the wayside because they can't deliver on the promises they are making. The one that the successful manager is using is usually one that has been on the bigtime market for a long time, (five or more years). It will also be around a long time to come, and continue to increase in value and usefulness. My Apple IIe with 128K of memory is a real workhorse for me

If you are not ready for a computer (which by the way is depreciable as a farm tool), you should be using a complete farm accounting system. You may need a professional farm accountant to keep the books. And after you have them, by all means make use of a good farm analysis program to answer the most vital questions about your farm business. Many Extension offices are now using the program developed by John Brockett. For a small fee, it is available to anyone who has adequate records for one or more years. John or I would be glad to talk to you about it.

Students who are enrolled in college or those who have completed high school and are ready to enter a college or university are eligible to apply for one of three William A. Russell Scholarships awarded annually by the AJCC. Each scholarship is for $650. and applicants must have an interest in or background with Jerseys.

Two V.L. Peterson Scholarships in the amount of $650. each are awarded each year to students who have completed at least one year of college. Any Jersey junior meeting that qualification may apply for these scholarships.

The Paul Jackson Memorial Scholarship is awarded each to one Jersey junior who has completed at least one year of college. The 1984 scholarship is for $750.

All applications for scholarships are due in the AJCC office by July 1. For further information, contact: The American Jersey Cattle Club, P.O. Box 27310, Columbus, Ohio 43227-9987.

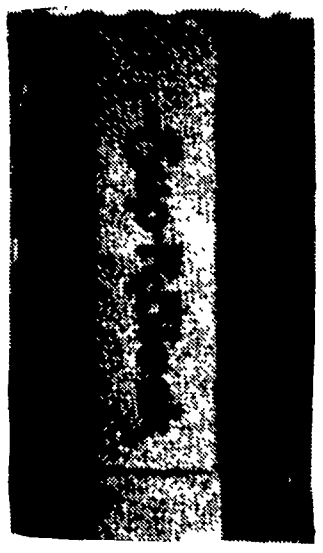
Purina® technology transforms liquid to block form for superb nutrition, feeding convenience and outstanding weather resistance.



A REAL PURINA EXCLUSIVE!

- Provides Vitamins A, D, and Minerals Magnesium, Calcium, Phosphorous, Iodine, Salt etc.
- Use 1 Block per 25 Animals.

CONVENIENT: Place in trough or on ground. One block will last 25 animals about 8 days, avg. 2 lb./hd./day.

VARIED USES: Feed your dry cows, growing heifers, and designed to meet the needs of challenge feeding your milking cows!

UNIQUE FORMULATION: Balanced, helps assure consumption while supplementing forages to provide balanced nutrition.
